SWAPS TAKE POSSESSION OF COLUMN

IS YANKEE SPORT

From Realty to Dishes, Beds to Automobiles, Array Is Large

By JENNIE SWENSON

Now is your chance if you have a store of left-over lumber in your woodshed and want a car to run to town in. Someone wants to swap an automobile in good condition for lumber. See the swap column for further particulars.

Have you a double bed and springs you would like to swap for a single bed and springs? If so, your chance to make the trade has come. Someone has a single bed and springs and wants to swap them for a double bed and springs. See the Swap column for further particulars.

There are other swaps that can be made. See all the offers in real estate that the people of Glendale are making in the swap column. Perhaps your chicken ranch in Arizona can be swapped for a house and lot in Glendale, (possible, but not probable). Take a look in the swap column anyway, because the unexpected might happen.

They are coming in thick and fast—the swaps. What have you to swap? Nothing is too small, nothing too large. The swap column can negotiate a trade for anything from a class pin to a subdivision, a certain brand of cigars to a grand piano. If you don't get the best of the bargain, it's your own fault. If you make an even trade, you have good business ability.

There are innumerable things one can swap. It isn't at all necessary that one should keep things that one dislikes about the home. The vase that doesn't match the draperies might just as well be replaced by some harmonious object; the sewing machine that no one uses could be swapped for some article of furniture more desired; the phonograph that has realized a lessened popularity through the acquisition of a newer model, is a swap in disguise, for someone might be willing to swap a camping tent for it, or any number of other possessions which might seem desirable to the owner.

Swapping is a business. It means an understanding of value, and it means an alert watch over the individual possessions with a constant effort to replace them with something of more value. This value is not based particularly on a material standpoint for often it is the case that the dollars and cents sign does not mean a gauge of the value to the owner. For this reason, swapping is a logical and sane method of eliminating the unnecessary possessions of the things desired.

Read the swap column. Here, if you don't know what you want in exchange for what you have to swap, you will find a category of swappable things, and immediately you can delve into the list of your own possessions in order to see what would make a fair swap for the items listed.

Glendale Dry Goods Joins Shopping Day

The Glendale Dry Goods company of 115 East Broadway will be found among the stores to join in the Glendale merchants plus the Press store to store campaign. An offer of special interest is being made by this store in cotton crepe pleated skirts, fancy stamped crepe skirts, crepe and silk dresses, yard goods, and hosiery. Many other specials are announced for Monday's trade, the advertisement of which will be found on page 2 of the shopping section.

DEPOT BATTLE IS RAGING ON THE SOUTH SIDE

Petitions to the City and Southern Pacific Are Circulated

Some of the residents of the southern part of Glendale are not through with the depot site proposition. They are determined to have their say, feeling sure that their views and ideas in this matter are sane and reasonable.

The city council has, contrary to the wishes of some of those living in the south part of Glendale, decided to pay $5,500 of the tax payers' money toward the purchase of two lots at the foot of Cerritos avenue, in order that that street may be opened to the proposed Cerritos avenue site of the new station.

That the residents of the south side do not intend to let this matter drop until all hope of having the station placed at Eulalia is shown by the following letter that is being circulated and signed among the south side residents, and the accompanying letter that is being sent to T. H. Williams, assistant general manager of the Southern Pacific Company.

Following is the letter that will be sent to the local council:

We, the undersigned, citizens and taxpayers of Glendale, respectfully represent, that:

First, We are opposed to the purchase of lots by the city for the opening of Cerritos avenue between Gardena avenue and the Southern Pacific grounds, because it is against public policy to spend city funds for a special purpose, unless there is an unquestioned general need. There is no such need in this case. This opening would entail, as a direct consequence thereof, the straightening, widening and improving of other streets at a cost many times the initial outlay of $5,500 for the lots. Most of this work would be unnecessary for the local wants of the residents of these streets, hence a liberal portion of its cost would fall upon the taxpayers as a whole.

Second, That the proposed depot is intended to serve the entire territory from Hollywood to Pasadena, with Glendale as the central point. The railroad management, after a careful survey, selected the foot of Eulalia street as the location that would best accommodate the whole district.

The street system of approaches to the Eulalia location can make adequate for an unlimited volume of traffic without delay or congestion and at small expense. Whereas, in the case of large crowds serious blockades would occur at the highly expensive Cerritos location, unless the railroad company should provide ample driveway outlets over its right-of-way.

Third, A large percentage of depot patrons will use automobiles and the Eulalia location is a better one for such traffic. The Pacific Electric would probably install a bus service between Brand boulevard and the depot for passengers who use its line.

Fourth, The controversy over the location of the depot has greatly delayed its construction, thereby depriving Glendale of many of the benefits that said depot will confer upon the community.

Fifth, For the foregoing reasons, we earnestly urge you to reaffirm the decision reached at the meeting of the city council, June 7, 1923, as set forth in the letter written at your direction, by the city attorney, to the Southern Pacific management.

We believe that definite and final action of this character would prevent further delay in the construction of the depot and hasten the completion of that very important improvement.

Following is the letter that will be sent to Mr. Williams of the Southern Pacific Company:

We, the undersigned citizens, taxpayers and patrons of the Southern Pacific lines, invite your attention to the accompanying copy of a communication addressed to the mayor and councilmen of the city of Glendale.

We believe that the Eulalia avenue location, selected by your management, is the natural and logical one to serve the purposes for which it is intended. If the front of your depot were built at Cerritos avenue upon the northern line of your property traffic south of Gardena avenue would have a restricted area for ingress and egress. Congestion could easily occur in case of conventions, excursions, etc. Such conditions do not exist at Eulalia.

The city council of Glendale discussed the whole question, for nearly two hours, at its regular meeting of the 7th instant. About two hundred citizens were invited to join in the discussion and to voice their opinions. The result was embodied in the letter of the 7th or 8th instant, written to you in accordance with the vote and at the direction of the council by the city attorney.

The opposition to the plans adopted by your company some months ago comes chiefly from those who have personal financial interests for seeking a change, and their influence with the council has caused that body to reverse itself for the fourth or fifth time within a few weeks.

The millions of dollars spent and being spent by the masses of Glendale have brought about a great increase in the freight and passenger revenues of your company. Therefore, we believe that the people at large should be heard and considered in this matter as well as those who more directly contribute to your income.

We believe you have a perfect right to locate your depot where you think best, so long as it conveniently and properly serves your patrons.

We see no reason for a change which will inflict a heavy financial burden upon the taxpayers of Glendale, and earnestly ask that you proceed with the construction of your depot at the Eulalia avenue site, selected by you and your engineers.

KRANZ TO ADMIT MORE PUPILS TO CLASSES

"Since I have been relieved of the duties of conducting the orchestra in the South Brand high school and elementary schools, I have decided to admit a few more pupils to my own classes, where I will give both individual instruction and class lessons in ensemble work," Julius Kranz, well-known violin instructor of Glendale announced today.

Julius Kranz, who has been a resident of Glendale for 12 years, and whose compositions both vocal and instrumental have become particularly well-known in this city, is in charge of the violin department at the Cavanah studios, 130 North Orange, and also conducts classes and gives private instruction at his home, 115 West Eulalia street.

It is only with the close of the school term that sufficient time is at his disposal to devote to additional pupils, as the enrollment in his classes at the present time is large. During the summer Kranz's pupils will be presented in several recitals.

Brand-Central Market Announces Big Sale

A hustle and hurry was noticeable at the Brand-Central Market, 207 North Brand boulevard, today, in response to the announcement that a sale of a large line of groceries would be conducted Saturday and all day Monday.

R. D. Estes, proprietor, stated this morning that he is offering the greatest bargains in groceries ever offered in Glendale for these two days, and that that accounts for the tremendous response.

Almost every item to be found among the provisions in the pantry are included in the sale Mr. Estes has announced. In each case, a reduction of from 10 to 25 per cent is noticeable.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

AN ADVENTURE IN ASTHMA

"Gracious goodness!" cried Grandma Lee, starting up in alarm as a terrifying sound came from the bedroom above her head. "If William has one of his attacks while his mother is away I shall be perfectly helpless! And it does sound as if he were having one now!"

The old lady had a quaint way of speaking aloud when there was no one in the room, and she hurried to the stairs, saying, "Dear me, dear me!" almost pathetically. "It's all right, grandmother. I'm all right; don't worry about me," choked Willie, who was a victim of asthma and accustomed to the unpleasantness of the attacks. He was a young man, but the future had assumed a rather hopeless tinge for him, all because of the attacks which so frequently threw his grandmother and his parents into a state of panic.

The attack proved so stubborn that in desperation the frightened grandmother sent for the family doctor. It was only after William lay sleeping comfortably, as a result of a hastily administered remedy, that Grandma Lee began to breathe freely herself.

"I declare, I feel as if I had had an attack of asthma myself," she Howard is pastor of the Congregational church. Rev. Howard is a member of the Rotarian club, and was attracted to the Press office through the Rotary sign on the window, where he made inquiries as to the meeting place of the club. He plans to visit in Glendale one week.

'QUICKSANDS' IS SUNDAY OFFERING AT THE T. D. & L.

The absorbing story of "Quicksands," which comes to the T. D. & L. Theater Sunday and Monday, is based in large part on the efforts of a band of criminals to smuggle narcotics into this country from Mexico. The cast is a powerful one and includes such notables as Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix,

Helene Chadwick in "Quicksands"

Alan Hale, Noah Beery, George Cooper, J. Farrell McDonald, Dick Sutherland, and many others, besides the 10th United States Cavalry. The story was written and produced by Howard Hawks and directed by Jack Conway, the latter responsible for "Lombard Light," "The Dwelling Place of Light," "The U. P. Trail" and many other pictures depending on big effects and swift action.

The new picture is a story of love and daring rather than an expose of the drug evil, although the most thrilling incidents in the story are brought about by the activities of the criminals clashing with the efforts of the government to stop them.

The rendezvous of the "ring" is a Mexican cantina or cafe, frequented by a group of the most sinister evildoers seen on the screen in many a day. These parts are played by the best "bad men" in pictures—Edwin Stevens, Jean Harlow, Frank Campeau, Lionel Belmore, William Dyer, Jack Curtis, James A. Marcus and Dick Sutherland. Life in the cantina is colorful and complicated, yet it is strictly real. No merrymaking masks the serious purpose of those gathered there, which is an exception.

tion of gas in the stomach and the intestines. Distention results and a consequent interference with the movements of the diaphragm and abdominal muscles. Free breathing is thus made difficult. There is pressure. Then, too, there may be in the stomach a chemical irritation set up by the undigested food. This causes spasms of various muscles and of course the result is an attack.

Grandma Lee was listening attentively and nodding her approval. That was exactly what she had always thought in less scientific terms, perhaps, but the thought was the same.

"I tell Willie," she said, "that if he would give up all red meats, fats and sweets, drink no water with meals, and sip a cup of very hot water an hour before each meal he would be better."

"It's sound advice," agreed the doctor, "but William is a youth, and youth chafes at restricted diets, naturally enough."

"Patients who suffer from asthma," the doctor said, "should eat moderately and slowly, take their meals punctually, and try to get their heartiest meal in the middle of the day. They should live principally upon green vegetables, fresh fruits, fish, chicken, and eggs and eat red meat very seldom. More respect for dietary rules would help ward off these attacks," concluded the doctor, who spoke from experience and with knowledge.

EXPERIENCE OF PAST MONDAYS LEADS TO BETTER BARGAINS IN THE SHOP TO SHOP PLUS PRESS CRUSADE

Goods That Can Be Sold on Monday and Needed, Are Found in the Shopping Section of the Issue Today, Together With Special Price Concessions on Goods It Is Desired to Clear

The fifth Monday in the shop to shop plus Daily Press opens with a bigger price display in the shopping section today than ever before.

It is a display which warrants careful study, not only by the purchasers but by the merchants themselves, each of the other.

While the consumers, the shoppers of Monday, study these prices and note the goods, each from a potential buying viewpoint, the merchants should study them from a competitive standpoint.

For some of these merchants are succeeding with their sales better than others in the same line of business. A clue to the secret of this may be found first in the advertising in today's Shoppers' Section.

A merchant may fail for several reasons, and the buying public be innocent of intent.

The merchant may be offering goods that he particularly wishes to sell.

He may be trying to sell goods on Monday that are not bought on Monday.

He may not have prepared with sufficient stock of the things he should be offering to sell.

He may be crowding too many things to the front, causing confusion.

In the better merchandising of today, the first concession a merchant must make is to sell to restrain. A merchant must not offer goods for sale merely because he wishes to move that line of goods. If he does, he must make a price reduction as great as his desire or need to move the line. This makes a price appeal that may overcome what might be the psychological opposition of the consumers to buy of that line.

Trying to sell goods on Monday that do not usually move on that day, is also a bar to Monday success.

Every merchant should know what the public is most sensitive to and wants on different days.

Every day in the week has its particular call for a particular merchandise. To attempt to sell another merchandise of Saturday on Monday is a cause of failure, excepting for the fact that it may awaken interest in purchasing when Saturday arrives.

The institution of Monday shopping is a step toward budget efficiency in that there are an increasing number of families who do budget their incomes. The survey of the bargains, or goods at salable prices, in the shopping section today lays before such families the Glendale price current of goods needed, after the budget has been adjusted to the fixed expenses. If the budget of one week does not permit of an investment on Monday, the Shopping Section gives anyway a cost which savings from later budgets may be able to meet. It gives objective savings.

This week the merchants have been making a special effort to interest the young folks. It is young folks' week. The young folks of today are the heads of families of the future in Glendale.

It is the wise merchant who begins to establish his goodwill now by appealing to the younger folks in the days of their graduation.

AMERICAN WOMEN SHY DRESSMAKERS

SCRANTON, Pa., June 22.—In the opinion of the country's chief department store executives, American women are suffering from a shortage of dress makers. This fact was revealed a few days ago by a questionnaire sent out by the Women's Institute of Domestic Arts and Sciences, Scranton.

Executives of the largest department stores were asked whether there was a shortage of professional dress makers in their community. One hundred and thirty-three replies were in the affirmative. The existence of a shortage was denied by 58 executives, located principally in the New England cities.

The shortage of dress makers was found to be general from coast to coast with the exception of four New England states. It was declared to be particularly acute in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

VAUDEVILLE AND HARRY CAREY AT THE GLENDALE

Combined tonight with the usual weekly vaudeville of five strong acts, Harry Carey, in "Canyon of the Fools," will be the strong film feature. Heralded as the most entertaining production in which Harry Carey has ever appeared, "Canyon of the Fools" will be shown at the Glendale theater tonight only. It is Mr. Carey's third big production for the Film Booking Offices of America, in which affiliation the famous western star is winning his greatest success. Based on Richard Matthews Hall's stirring tale of the same title, which ran serially recently in The Saturday Evening Post, "Canyon of the Fools" is an ideal vehicle for Mr. Carey. His whimsical humor, his daring and his keen sense of the dramatic make of his character a masterpiece of impersonation. The story has to do with the adventures of a cowboy, one Bob McCarty, and the plot is replete with thrilling incident and a smashing climax. Carey has a role which critics regard as easily the most winning of his career before the camera. The cast includes Fred Stanton, Marguerite Clayton, Joseph Harris, Jack Curtis, Carmen Arselie, Charles J. Le Moine, Vester Pegg, Murdock MacQuarrie and Mignonne Golden. Val Paul's direction is evident in the many striking episodes of love and adventure.

THE GAME

JAMES W. FOLEY

We lost the game, Brother, I'm sorry to say. Sometimes at our best it will happen that way. We lost the game, Brother, but let's not despair. There is no disgrace if we played and played fair. The breaks were against us, perhaps, as they are. Sometimes in the game, but we'll hitch to a star. We'll play a bit harder the next game we're in. And the breaks may be with us and then we'll win.

Oh yes, Little Brother, I know how it goes. To lose is a sorrow that every man knows. We can't all be winners in each game that's played. But the loss of one game should not make us afraid.

It's not what the score is; it's more being square. In having good spirit and playing quite fair. So let's not be downcast or blue or dismayed. It's not in the runs but the way they are made.

Cheer up, Little Brother, the chance comes again. We'll play a bit harder and win the game then. It's much so in life, as you'll find day by day. The more games you lose then the harder you play. I've lost many games and I'm losing them yet. But somebody must lose so let us not fret. A fairly played game lost is not stain or sin. We'll just keep on trying; at last we shall win.

Truths in Epigram

We become wiser by adversity; prosperity destroys our appreciation of the right.—Seneca.

Old men's prayers for death are lying prayers, in which they abuse old age and long extent of life. But when death draws near not one is willing to die, and age no longer is a burden to them.—Euripides.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

Among the many shocking traffic accidents recently added to a list already long, the worst have been at grade crossings. They point to the absolute necessity for abolition of such crossings. No mere precaution is effective. If there is a chance to do so, drivers will try to beat trains over the crossing. If they do not do this deliberately, they do it while they are not thinking. Watchmen may wave red flags, wiggles swing their warnings, and bells sound the alarm. All this is to little purpose. The accidents continue. Even a barrier erected to stop the oncoming vehicle, is likely to be broken down.

In England there are no grade crossings. Thus it is that over there the right-of-way never is heaped with the wreckage of smashed machines. Probably the English driver is no wiser than others, but to a large extent the high road he travels has been made fool-proof.

In many of the accidents that have claimed from one to five victims, the view of the railroad track was clear in both directions. Had there been no precautionary device whatever, the possibility of accident could have arisen from carelessness alone. With a swiftly approaching train in plain sight, the driver has elected certain death. In one instance, an automobile had raced a train, and getting to a crossing slightly ahead of the cars, turned in front of them just in time to be splintered, all the occupants being killed. There is no mild remedy for such gross recklessness.

Abolition of grade crossings will be a stupendous undertaking, requiring much time and vast expenditure, but no other method of safety has been suggested.

A SURPLUS

It is a comforting reflection that the national treasury comes through the fiscal year with a surplus instead of a deficit. Of course, cynics will sneer and scoffers will scoff, and we shall have the usual "why didn't they do this and that as they should have done and there would be no surplus," but the fact remains that there is a surplus, and that there has been a checking of the loose extravagances of government expenditures.

Taxation in this country is not as heavy as in many other countries, England for instance, and it could be higher and not do great national damage. But the point is that there is no need for taxation for waste and extravagance. After all, the government has no money but that it gets from the people and the people have no money, in most instances, except what they earn. And the dollar taken in taxation for extravagant expenditure is just as much missed by the taxpayer as the one taken for just the necessary expense.

Taxation is the big problem of all countries. And there has grown up somehow in councils of administration the notion that the state or the nation can operate without regard to economy or the principles that govern in business. It is as possible for a nation to be bankrupt as for a corporation or an individual. A nation is bankrupt when the light of hope is dead in its people. And pinching poverty soon destroys the light of hope. We are on the right track at Washington in lopping off extravagances, curtailing needless expense and scraping the barnacles off that part of the ship of state that is represented by the treasury. President Harding and Mr. Mellon have done good work.

CIVIC DUTY

Grave charges are made against the administration of our sister city of Los Angeles, charges involving the corruption of officials and their connivance at violations of the law. Always there are charges of malfeasance in cities of great size. Not always are the charges true or well founded. A good many things are said in heat and anger—things that calmer reflection would not say. Always there is enough of the shadowed side of life in large cities, and always there has been. To prevent crime altogether, has never been successfully done, but there is little doubt that the laxity of official administration makes for an increase in crime.

The impartial hearing of the charges made, by a grand jury, ought to clear the atmosphere. Charges that have been made freely will be substantiated or fall to the ground. Officials who have been charged with malfeasance or misfeasance will be cleared or condemned. In either case, the way will be open for a better state of public feeling. But public feeling is often inflamed by an ex parte relation of what purport to be facts, but which prove to be not such facts as purported.

We have faith to believe that the people of Los Angeles will solve their problems rightly. They have built a great city and are building a greater one, and they will in the end attend to the moral side of the building as well as the physical. It will be well for the people to hear all sides of the matter in issue.

That the cities of Southern California lead all the cities of the country in the number of dwellings erected during the year 1922 is but an indication of the progress which this part of the west has made, a progress that has commanded the attention of the world as pointing to the possibilities of which the west holds in the future development of industry and business. With the great Orient ready to burst into industrial activity, unlimited labor awaiting the call to life, millions upon millions of acres of land to be utilized, the possibilities for trade expansion on the Pacific coast of these United States is beyond reckoning.

About one-half of a man's life is devoted to rectifying the mistakes of the other half.

"TEACHING" RESPECT

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Just cut this gem out of a "peepul's publication." "Children should be taught to respect the police uniform."

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

The reasons follow. Yesterday a committee called on me to ask my help in teaching children to "respect the flag." They seemed to feel that a special campaign was needed for this purpose. Other committees are busy teaching the kids to respect the President, congress, state legislatures, chambers of commerce, charity drives, the Salvation Army, both of the great political parties, the Ministerial union, the American marine, the national Red Cross, the Mutual Protective Order of Motion Picture Producers, the International bankers, the Garment Workers' union and the Lord of Israel knows what else.

In short we are in the midst of a national hysteria for fear the youth of the land will respect nothing, which is a reflection on the young.

Isn't this state of mind indicative of our own mental attitude, the attitude that fears that children will see through appearances that seek to replace facts?

Why should a child especially be taught respect for the national flag? It is the emblem of his home, his traditions, his protection from danger, in short of all that he loves and upon which he depends. Surely it is natural and right that he should love it.

We do not cry out hysterically that we should teach children to love their parents. We know they will do so because they understand what parents contribute in comfort, love and service to their lives. It seems to me it should be sufficient to teach the children of the nation what the United States means and then realize without fear that they will automatically love it.

In the same way we should assume that children will automatically love all that is good, fine, dignified and genuine if only they know such things.

No child has to be taught, for example, to love a good teacher, but I can easily imagine that certain bad teachers might desire a campaign to "teach respect for teacher."

Now we come to the point of beginning, the uniforms of the policeman.

Parents use policemen to frighten children; that is a shame and an evidence of parental weakness and inability to discipline by moral methods, because fear is not a moral weapon.

However, since the policeman in many of our cities have been assigned to the duty of steering school children across automobile infested streets to safety, the children have acquired through such service a love for and respect of the uniform which they did not have before this daily contact between protector and protected. It would be mighty hard to frighten a child by telling him that the "police would get him" if that child had been accustomed daily to being led to safety by a big smiling patrolman.

You get the idea? In all this frantic crying for the "teaching of respect" we are forgetting that in every human soul respect naturally flows toward those things that merit it. All we need to do for the child is to show him the connection between that which protects him and adds to his comfort and safety and his assurance of that comfort and safety.

Let no one assume that in writing this I have any motive of disrespect toward my country or its institutions, but I am a little weary of hysteria. Children have a tremendously clear vision, and they love with intensity anything that serves them, once they understand. Here is an example:

I myself was brought up with an intense love for the confederate flag and a corresponding hatred of what my parents called the "union flag." That was very sad for I loved the emblem of something that did not exist, and until I was a woman long grown I had no feeling of nationality. The national feeling came gradually and after the death of many painful prejudices. And it came to stay and came intensely, with a great rush of love after the conferring of the franchise of the women of the nation. Also it surged up from the unconscious with such spontaneity that I was myself amazed.

My husband and I were walking down the street during a parade when I looked up and saw fluttering in the breeze a great American flag. The muscles tightened round my throat and the tears dimmed the flying colors.

"Thank God," I cried half choked, "I love it at last."

"Love what?" asked my husband curiously. "My flag," I said. "It has given me justice. I don't belong to dead things any more. I am an American citizen."

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

How did you use the world today, if it is a fair question? Usually we ask people how the world is using them.

JAMES W. FOLEY

And now we turn the question about. Put it the other way. How did you use the world today?

Your job, for instance. Whatever it may have been.

Everybody ought to have a job.

Everybody who is well and hearty and hale.

You may call it a position or a situation or whatever you choose.

But after all it is a job. Something to do.

Something real to do.

Not golfing or picnicking or anything like that.

Those are perhaps the ornaments of activity.

Serving a useful purpose in maintaining your health.

Play is to keep you in trim to do some work.

It is not for the sake of playing.

But it is for your sake.

That you may keep well and healthy and keep on working.

Because you ought to keep on working as long as there is a day's work left in you.

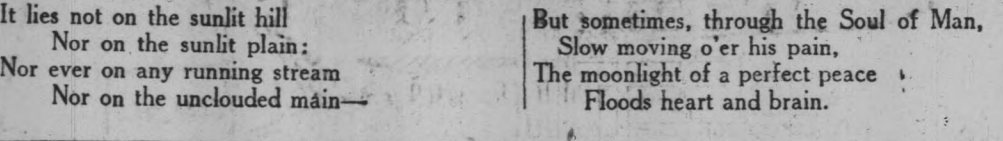

For your sake again.

And for the sake of the world.

So how did you use your job today?

Work at it or shirk at it?

Do it cheerfully or fret about it?

Songs of the Poets

The White Peace—By William Sharp

It lies not on the sunlit hill
Nor on the sunlit plain;
Nor ever on any running stream
Nor on the unclouded main—

But sometimes, through the Soul of Man,
Slow moving o'er his pain,
The moonlight of a perfect peace
Floods heart and brain.

POOR ADAM, HE'S TO BLAME

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE war between the evolutionists and the anti-evolutionists goes merrily forward. William Jennings Bryan, the plumed knight who leads the forces of literalism, free coinage of silver and other mixed heresies of reaction and reform, continues to take his stand upon the theory that creation is entirely dramatic and artificial, and that those who insist upon the law of growth are outraging the Scriptures and undermining the morals of youth.

Dr. Charles W. Stiles of Wilmington, North Carolina, in an address before the Washington Biological society, said recently that if Mr. Bryan's denial of the theory of evolution is correct, our forefather, Adam, must have had in his body all the germ diseases which afflict man today.

Further, he said that Noah must have been not only a capable ship captain, but the world's first successful public health officer, since he must have preserved all the animals in the ark without losing a single elephant or flea. He also must have kept all the germs alive which today are actively engaged in business.

We have sometimes felt keenly the crowded condition of the earth and have thought, particularly when trying to get something in a department store or get somewhere on a subway, that there are entirely too many people. We have longed for "a lodge in some vast wilderness, some boundless contiguity of space, and have fondly turned our mind to Adam and pictured what a blessed and quiet time he must have had in the Garden of Eden before his wife got the family into trouble.

We have imagined the delight of having plenty to eat from the breadfruit trees and the ham and egg bushes with beverages flowing from the cooling spring and roast chicken hanging on the Christmas tree.

Then also all the animals were tame and when we needed recreation we could go out and play without alarm with the lion, the wart hog and the giraffe and watch the amusing capers of the ornithomimetic paradox which as all little boys and girls know, is a species of duck-billed platypus.

But since Dr. Stiles tells us now that Adam must have been nursing along a whole biological laboratory full of deadly diseases, germs, microbes and septic seeds, the idea seems not so good.

On the whole we will go back to our own one or two fatal diseases and worry along with them.

The mystery of the Taylor murder bobs up at irregular intervals for inspection, never ceasing, however, to be a mystery.

Smokers who set the forests afire ought to quit smoking or keep out of the forests.

to the man-power of the nation but to industry and capital also we should not only have better assurance that this would be done if war came but we might also have an additional safeguard against the coming of war.

NEWS OF THE STARS

By ISABEL M. LEWIS

Sun Farthest North—Summer Begins

Yesterday, June 22, at 6:03 a. m., Eastern standard time, 5:03 a. m. Central standard time, 4:03 a. m. Mountain standard time, 3:03 a. m. Pacific standard time, the sun reached its greatest distance north of the equator, or, as the astronomer would say, its highest northern declination, summer began in northern latitudes and winter in southern latitudes. At this time the sun was in the constellation of Gemini or the Twins which, we may recall, was visible in the western sky in the early evening in April and May. In a few weeks more, when the sun passes on in its apparent eastern circuit of the heavens into the constellation of Cancer, the Crab, the early riser may see this constellation of the Twins in the eastern sky before sunrise.

Some twenty centuries ago the sun was in the constellation of Cancer at the beginning of summer. Now the gradual westward shifting of the equinoxes, or points of intersection of the plane of the earth's equator with the plane of its orbit, which is called the Precession of the Equinoxes, has brought the sun into the constellation of Gemini at this time. For the same reason future generations of men, some twenty centuries from now will find the sun in the constellation of Aries at the beginning of summer. In the time of Hipparchus the sun was in Aries at the beginning of spring.

At the beginning of summer in the northern hemisphere the sun passes directly overhead at noon in latitude 23 degrees, 27 minutes, north, which we recognize as the position of the Tropic of Cancer, also as the obliquity of the ecliptic or the angle that the earth's equator makes with the plane of its orbit. As the sun is now farthest north, June 22 is for us the longest day of the year, but for the inhabitants of the southern hemisphere it is the shortest day of the year.

Strange as it may seem, the earth is now in that part of its orbit farthest from the sun. Its aphelion, or the point in its orbit that is most distant from the sun, will be reached on July 5. The perihelion, or point nearest to the sun, is reached each year about January 2, or shortly after our winter begins. When in perihelion the earth's distance from the sun is about 91,400,000 miles and when in aphelion 94,500,000 miles so that we are about 3,000,000 miles farther from the sun now at the beginning of summer than we were last December at the beginning of winter. If we lived in the southern hemisphere, however, we would find that we were three million miles farther from the sun at the beginning of winter than at the beginning of summer.

One might naturally expect, as a result, to find the winters much colder and the summers much warmer in the southern hemisphere than they are in the northern hemisphere. As a matter of fact, the seasonal changes appear, if anything, to be less extreme in the southern hemisphere than in our own latitudes. This is attributed to the fact that there is far more water surface in the southern hemisphere than there is in the northern hemisphere and it is well known that temperature changes are less extreme over water than they are over land. There is no doubt, however, that if this factor were eliminated, the seasonal changes would be more extreme in the southern hemisphere than they are in our own latitudes.

OUR CHILDREN

The Pink Tree

There is a tree in Bronx Park, New York, that is a dream of pure beauty each Maytime. At a turn of a shaded road it surprises you into a breathless ecstasy, so lovely, so much a thing of heaven it is!

Sitting back from the road on a plot of green it glows like an illumined dome with a soft pink radiance that casts an ethereal light on whatever it touches.

Car after car swings around the curve and halts. No one can pass that tree without stopping a moment to feel his spirit slip out and away in answer to the call of an exquisite beauty scarce of this world.

No one speaks above a whisper as he gazes. Footsteps are hushed and faces are filled with reverence as the soft pink glory shines upon them.

Now and again a small petal detaches itself and drifts to the grass below. But I have never heard the bees who, I know, must visit it, nor have I seen the birds who, I am sure, rest on its boughs. Nothing but the lovely softness of blossom and shadow and the spirit of the tree.

Nor have I ever seen anyone approach to break off a spray of bloom. "No," said the watchman. "Summaz they leave it alone. Don't never tetch it, summaz. Seem to be asacred, summaz. They break off branches of the other trees in a while. Them igrant ones, they do. But this one, no! They let it alone, summaz."

But it was not because they were so "asacred," I think it was because the tree was so lovely, so perfectly a thing of sun and water and air, an inspiration of the Creator, that they looked at it and called it very good and went on singing in their hearts.

This Maytime I made my pilgrimage to the tree. I rounded the curve with my eyes closed so that its beauty might burst upon me a glory from the Garden of Eden.

I felt it near and opened my eyes to drink in its loveliness once more and my heart started. Standing under its branches, the pink glow falling full on their upturned faces, stood two children, a boy and a girl.

Their hats on the grass at their feet, their hands clasped, they gazed up into the pink tree. The petals fell softly, softly. Some of them clung to the girl's dark hair. They neither stirred nor whispered for what seemed a long, long time.

A motor snorting around the corner awakened them and they sighed and remembered. They picked up their hats and mounted their wheels by the roadside and went on their way. But I knew what they carried away with them from the blossoming tree.

I don't know its name. "Joyce Kilmer's tree," I call it. You'll find it in Bronx park at the turn of the road, in May time.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

This is addressed to Johnson James, which is the name signed to a squawk in the morning paper. Mr. James says he is a mutt. He knows it. He is fifty years old, broke, and out of a job.

A man who passes the age of forty without having made some provision for the years to come is a mutt," says he.

Granted. No argument.

"If I do not get a job," he continued, "and I'm walking the streets every day in the effort to land one, I'll take to the river. Meanwhile I'll keep my shoulders up and the quiver out of my lips. I may be a failure, but I'm game."

The case seems to be proved against Mr. James. He is a mutt, for a fact. A sure-fire, guaranteed, warranted not to tear or ravel mutt. Not for keeping his shoulders up and his lips tight, but for talking about taking to the river if he fails to land a job. That is the sublimated essence of muttishness. There is nothing pleasant about any river running through any city. At the best it is wet. It is certainly filthy, and the chances are the cop on the dock would fish him out with a boat-hook.

I know a man who was in Johnson James' place at fifty. All his working life he had held responsible positions, had drawn good salaries, and had not saved a nickel. Through no fault of his own, like Johnson James, he lost his job and had to walk the streets. When he could not get what he wanted he took what he could. He became a steward on a steamship, and a rotten ship at that. The new life blasted some of his old ideas out of him, freshened him up, gave him new vigor. He succeeded in life somewhat late, but not substantially. Fifty years of living taught him how to make the most of success when it came.

He wasn't a mutt. He did not talk of the river.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—?

State banks and insurance companies in Germany are issuing bonds in terms of 50 bushels of rye or a ton or five tons of coal in an endeavor to get a currency standard more stable than the wildly fluctuating mark. Ninety per cent of the 150 grams of radium, costing approximately $20,000,000, which has been consumed in the United States, has come from the carnallite ores of the south west Colorado and southeast Utah.

CAN YOU PAINT A WORD PICTURE OF GLENOAKS?

Offers Cash Award for Best Description of Its Beautiful Scenes

Hackneyed phrases and customary word pictures fall short of describing the beauties and attractions of Glenoaks, according to the Frank Meline company.

Accordingly, with the opening of unit number two of this picturesque Glendale subdivision, they are announcing a series of cash awards for the best description of Glenoaks written by visitors to the tract.

A group of three impartial critics familiar with the subdivision will judge word-pictures as submitted by participants. $500 will be subdivided into awards, as follows: First award, $100; second award, $75; third award, $50; fourth award, $25; with five additional awards of $10 each.

Everyone is invited to participate. There are no strings tied to the offer. The only requirement is that participants shall have visited the tract, either during the past few months that it has been on the market, or before, mailing in their contributions.

Either descriptions of the tract or "reasons why" the tract appealed to the writers are acceptable for entry. Descriptions are limited to 150 words. They must be in the hands of the Meline company by Friday, July 20, and awards will be announced Sunday, July 22.

It is the intention of the Meline company publicity department to utilize the material so submitted in further bringing the desirable features of the tract before the public.

Glenoaks is located in the east section of Glendale. By referring to the map, persons interested in visiting the tract will find it a triangular shaped projection of the Prices of Glenoaks lots range from $800 to $3,000 and higher. Hillside and hilltop lots are available, overlooking Eagle Rock City and the surrounding countryside, in addition to home sites in the glen. Improvements are included in the prices.

MANY MAROONED IN CHINA SHIP

[By Associated Press]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—The China Mail steamer Nila has become a floating hotel in San Francisco Bay with 201 guests who, for the present at least, have no other place of abode and many of them no country.

The 201 international guests include the ship's officers and crew and thirty-one passengers, some of whom are children.

The steamer has been marooned in the bay for a month since it returned from the Orient. The reason is the China Mail company has failed and the United States government has attached the ship.

The company, it is said, owes the Nila's crew several thousand dollars back pay and the amount is growing at the rate of $158.79 daily. The stores have been exhausted but provisions are sent out to the ship daily by the company. The government in acquiring an attachment on the ship did not acquire the ship's liabilities.

All the members of the crew but nineteen are Chinese but they are not allowed to land in China or here. The nineteen may land but are without funds and by staying on the ship are certain of food and lodging. The passengers wait with hope the time when they may continue their voyage.

SPARR HEIGHTS IS PRESENT DAY MIRACLE

"Talk about miracles," said Mr.

Barnum, of Barnum & Walters, developers of Sparr Heights, "what miracle is there like that of growth. Of course, I don't mean the growth of a living animal or of a vegetable form, because such miracles are in a certain sense natural processes, accomplished always, in the same stages, in the same way, and never differing in essentials at the same age of the species. What I mean is the miracle of the growth of population, the increase in development, the change that a month, a year, ten years, makes in this section of the country.

"I travel over a road this week, perhaps, where there is no indication, upon a certain part of it, that the brush and scrub on wide spaces of vacant land will ever be disturbed. Perhaps next month I shall pass that way and I shall see a real estate office by the roadside, and several signs that tell me that this out-of-the-way, lonely place, miles from nowhere, with nothing beyond, is the most desirable of residence locations, and though it does seem strange that anyone should chance it there, actually, people do buy it, and then their friends come along and settle near them, and in a little while there is a group of houses forming a settlement.

"Many of these new subdivisions have no possible future, except that they furnish an abiding place where a few people may rust out, without amusement, business or visible means of support, but the limit of such growth is soon reached. Then there are other locations, like Glendale, Hollywood and Sparr Heights, where there is a logical reason for settlement, an impossibility of growth being stationary, and where cities soon become populous. Everybody remembers the time when Glendale was a strawberry field, and when Hollywood was a sparsely settled small village, but in both places the tide of busy life constantly flowed through them, they were on main arteries to Los Angeles, they had every advantage of lovely surroundings, ideal climate and convenience of access to the metropolis.

The rapid accession of population in Southern California found its first outflow of home-builder class from the metropolis in the nearby suburbs, but what was then distance is now no longer so, and Sparr Heights, through the magic of the automobile, which annihilates spaces, is now actually nearer Los Angeles than Hollywood was a few years ago, and here a town is certain to go up that will duplicate the marvel of growth that we have witnessed there and in Glendale.

"We have had the vision, here in Sparr Heights, to discern that farm and orchard, vineyard and grazing lands, cannot exist within a city, and we know that in every direction, within 20 miles from Los Angeles, there are distinct reasons for growth. Many of these reasons are purely industrial, but we know that the homeseekers have not left their old locations in eastern states altogether for the purpose of industry. In fact, the vast majority of newcomers are here to enjoy life, and they want homes that realize their ideal of Southern California, and we have made ready to supply their wants.

"People who have even a modest competence, who want to engage in city business, and want to be out of the atmosphere of commerce and industry in their social life, are seeking these lovely rolling hills and the sun-kissed valleys and will build their homes here where they can golf, ride, hike and have a good time generally. They have had enough of the so-called strenuous life, and if they engage in business, or work on a salary, they will proportion their work to their play, and that is the only way, after all, to live.

"We can none of us postpone life to some future time. We have to live it day by day, as it happens, and when we take our pleasures as an antidote for strenuousness, and are situated as are the home builders in Sparr Heights, we shall neither wear out, rust out, nor fade out, but will be prosperous, peaceful and happy, and that seems to me to be the ideal state for both old and young."

WHY YOU SHOULDN'T

The driver is often cautioned against driving his car with the generator disconnected, but seldom told why. Without an outlet for the current it charges, the stored up energy damages the wiring. Ground the generator when using the car with it disconnected from the battery.

$300 for a Word-picture of Glenoaks

HACKNEYED phrases that are daily used to describe ordinary subdivisions do not begin to do Glenoaks justice. It is so delightfully different—so intimately appealing—so reassuringly restful with its cosy little hills, covered with oaks, hiding away level orchard lots from the busy outside world.

So with the opening of Unit No. 2—farther up in the picturesque glen (Unit No. 1 has been sold out)—we seek new word pictures to help visualize it for those busy folks who have not found time to visit Glenoaks in person.

WE WANT YOU TO HELP US $300 Will Be Awarded

First Award, $100; Second Award, $75; Third Award, $50; Fourth Award, $25. Five Awards of $10.00 Each. Awards Made Sunday, July 22.

Write a Brief Description of This Tract in 150 Words or Less. You Don't Have to Be a Professional Writer or an Author.

A ten-word description may win first choice of the critics. Three impartial critics will be selected to make awards. If you prefer to write REASONS why you like Glenoaks, do that. The critics will decide who tells the story best. The material will be used in subsequent advertising of Glenoaks.

So many people do not know that right here, close to Los Angeles—about 25 minutes from downtown—they can buy fine home sites in a beautiful, heavily wooded glen, with all improvements included in the price—water, gas, electricity, cement curbs and hard surfaced streets—at prices starting as low as $800. Help us tell them.

Address your word-pictures to the Contest Director, in care of our main office, or leave it at the tract office.

"None of our great statesmen and geniuses were city bred, and though my kids will probably never set any very wet rivers on fire, still I want them to grow up

"Everybody needs a real home where they can strike deep and permanent spiritual roots, whether they are parents or not, but children must have one in order to be happy. Children are our earthly immortality, and their rearing is our real business in our family. I am going to make my simple home in Acacia Hills a real home, and that takes some constructive ability beside that of the carpenter, believe me."

GLENDALE CREST PENNSYLVANIA WORK BEING RUSHED STARTS WORK FOR BABIES

According to J. D. Miller, president of the firm which owns and sells Glendale Crest, no money is being spared to make the improvements at the property in a manner to suit all purchasers and to rush them to an early completion. The curbs and sidewalks are already in on both Luton drive and Terrace drive.

"When our engineer laid out this property," said Mr. Miller, he was instructed to keep the thought of view and beautiful surroundings as the prize factor in his work.

"He has certainly accomplished this in a perfect manner. The winding streets, each one gradually climbing to higher ground where the vista becomes more complete and charming, are designed in such a way as to make practically every lot command a view to be envied by the city dwellers below.

"All the magnificent old oaks and other varieties of trees have been saved and many lots include one or more of these fully developed beauties. Money cannot buy such ornaments on property less fortunate in its environments. The public has evidently approved our plans and improvements at Glendale Crest. Although the property has only been on the market a short time, over $175,000 worth has been already disposed of. A good many speculators are among our purchasers. They realize that values will rise quickly, as this part of Glendale, although in its infancy as a subdivision section, is beginning to attract the attention of all Southern California home-seekers.

"The fact that we have all the conveniences and accessibility of the city and the natural beauty and view of the hills has helped us make many sales.

"We are keeping our tract open every day of the week to accommodate the many visitors that come to inspect the view. Being on Sycamore drive at Verdugo road, and only two blocks from the Wilson avenue car line, Glendale Crest is easily reached from Glendale or Los Angeles."

Pennsylvania state health authorities are conducting campaigns for better babies through the agency of the churches, according to John D. Donnelly, M. D., assistant chief, division of child health, Pennsylvania health department. Dr. Donnelly, writing in "Mother and Child," the official organ of the American Child Health association, stated that in the "well baby campaign in the churches" that the cradle rolls, baptismal records and beginners' classes furnished a representatives list of the community babies.

Dr. Donnelly explained that the aim of the church child health campaign was:

1. To give every child in a congregation, under six years of age, a complete physical examination by a physician.

2. To follow up cases where defects were discovered and help to secure their correction.

3. To demonstrate to parents the value of keeping their children under medical observation and to acquaint them with practical means of preventing certain diseases and lessening the occasion of others.

"Good health has been mentioned as one of the stones in the foundation of good character," pointed out Dr. Donnelly. "Physical defects and chronic troubles are often insidious in their onset and are sometimes not recognized by parents until they are well developed or the child's constitution is seriously affected. As many babies are assumed to be well simply because they do not complain, the state health department of Pennsylvania conceived the novel idea of carrying on a 'well baby campaign in the churches.'"

The first campaign was put on in Harrisburg under the direction of the division of child health with the cooperation of the nursing division and the cooperation of local physicians was obtained, 25 volunteering their services for examining the children.

Dr. Donnelly writes that the division of child health made a canvass of all churches in the city and brought about endorsement and acceptance of the plan by clergy and lay officials. A general committee of women was organized composed of representatives from every protestant, Jewish and catholic church in the city. Sub-committees were established in each congregation. "Each subcommittee took a census of every child under six years of age in its church including those not enrolled but whose parents were adherents of the church," explained the writer. "The names and addresses of the children were given to the division of child health."

Definite days were allotted to each church and invitations were sent out to the parents whose children were in the census, inviting them to bring their children at a definite hour on a certain day to a baby station for examination. Members of the subcommittee got in touch with the mothers prior to the designated examination day and personally renewed the invitation. The baby station was opened in the auditorium of the free library and the campaign continued for six weeks.

All the babies, according to Dr. Donnelly, were inspected for evidence of infections or contagious diseases, no sick babies being admitted. They were weighed and measured and given a complete physical examination by a physician.

When defects or other troubles were found they were pointed out to the mother and the child was referred to the family physician for treatment. The station gave no treatment of any kind. The examining physician was aided by a state nurse who, after the physician had given a mother advice concerning her baby, would explain in detail points which the physician wished emphasized.

Two weeks previous to the campaign the commissioner of health asked all clergymen to preach a health sermon. In these sermons parents were reminded that they were responsible for the health of their children.

The American Child Health association, with Herbert Hoover as its president, is an exponent of national activities in behalf of mothers and children, and is working for periodic health examinations and supervision of babies and children; adequate care of mothers and babies before, at and after birth; early registration of every birth; health inspection in the home; health education through popular channels; adequate professional training for health workers and interesting children through the schools in the establishment of health habits.

Such prominent health workers as Dr. L. Emmett Holt, Dr. Phillip Van Ingen and Dr. Livingston Farrand are members of the executive committee. Courtenay Dinwiddie is general executive, Ella Phillips Crandall is director of field service, Dr. Richard A. Bolt is director of medical service, and Sally Lucas Jehu is director of the health education division.

FARM SURVEY TO BE BROADCASTED

There have been more land sales in Minnesota in the last three months than in the whole of 1922, according to a survey of farm land transfers over the state, reported to the National Association of Real Estate Boards from the Minnesota Realty association. The survey gives a highly optimistic report of agricultural conditions in this typical state, and shows that the farm land market is reflecting the bet-

HOW TERMINATE LABOR TROUBLES

[By Associated Press]

ST. LOUIS, June 19.—If employers would spend half as much time cultivating the friendship, respect and good will of labor as they do fighting labor organizations there would not be a labor problem, Sherman Rogers, of New York, today told the delegates to the fourteenth annual convention of Rotary International here.

"We waste too much time talking about the labor agitator," the speaker said. "He can only be recognized as the logical friend of the worker where the management has refused to extend its friendship."

"I was in the Seattle shipyards working as a helper in 1917 when Charles M. Schwab made his tour of the American shipbuilding institutions. We'd heard he was a labor hater."

"The first instant the great steel man looked us over it was apparent to every man in the bunch that Mr. Schwab really liked him. He stopped on that platform Charles M. Schwab, autocrat, millionaire magnate. He stepped off that platform 30 minutes later, friend Charles. In that short 30 minutes he had destroyed the hatred that agitators had been building for 15 years."

"The world is built on ideals. Labor wants to be square. If labor follows the wrong leader it is not because they want to misunderstand but because the right leader has been asleep at the switch and hasn't given the men a chance to understand him."

"There are three sides to every question—your side, the other fellow's and the right side. I don't believe there was ever a question in either modern or ancient history where either side to the dispute was 100 per cent right."

"Ninety-five per cent of men, whether they wear broadcloth or overalls, want to play the game square. Lack of contact means lack of understanding."

"The employer has spent a lot of time selling his honesty, his fairness and personality to the banker, the wholesaler, the retailer and the public. How much has he spent trying to sell that same personality, honesty and fairness to his workmen? Solving a labor trouble is not a mysterious affair. It is simply a proposition of using common horse sense."

tered conditions. Findings made to date indicate that with good crops this fall, land values should take a decided upward trend. The survey was made to put the association in touch with crop conditions and the status of farm lands in the state.

ALTA CANYADA

This is only one of the beautiful sights that this estate offers you. High above the noise, dust and turmoil of the city lies this wonderful Tract, and still within thirty-five minutes' drive from the heart of Los Angeles.

To live among the pines, firs, redwoods and flowers has been everyone's desire, and now it can be realized, where everything is complete, wonderful winding boulevards, soft spring water on all estates, and a beautiful canyon practically at your doorstep, at your disposal at all times for a recreation ground.

Imagine all of this, if possible, and then come and see and be convinced—for the half has not been told.

Think of an estate in this location as large as four city lots, priced from $2700 up, with very reasonable terms.

However, our feeble words fail to describe this magnificent wooded park—all we can say is, COME AND SEE before it is too late to buy.

LIVE OAKS ABOUND

Abundance of Water in
This Beautiful
Tract

BY JENNIE SWENSON

It is only a stone's throw from Alta-Canyada, the region of incomparable estates and innumerable delights, to the enchanted wooded canyon, where rippling mountain waters dance down from their mysterious sources in the high places of the Sierras, gurgling about the roots of the live oaks and sycamores that follow the path of the stream, which forms a cooling delight in the summer time, and a never-ending abundant supply of water both for irrigation and domestic use.

This abundance of water is perhaps the chief factor in the development of Alta-Canyada, where scores of home-seekers have found just the site they have desired above all others. Realizing the importance of conserving the supply, subdividers of Alta-Canyada have caused a huge reservoir to be constructed, to contain 1,500,000 gallons. In addition, there are three other reservoirs which are kept at full capacity, the excess conducted by a pipe line back to the canyon whence it came.

Aside from this very practical feature which has influenced, more than any other factor, the buying of homes in Alta-Canyada, there is no waiting for development in this wooded park. Trees and shrubs have been in since a time when it was little dreamed that this acreage would be brought under the surveyor's line and offered to the buying public. Paved, winding boulevards leading to the head of the trail which takes its way down the canyon to the numerous miniature waterfalls, a part of whose volume is conducted by pipe lines to each of the reservoirs and thence to each site in Alta-Canyada.

From Glendale, Alta-Canyada is reached by following Verdugo road north to Michigan avenue, where entrance can be made to the estates either by way of Palm drive or Braeside. The Alta-Canyada office is to be found at the crest of the heights, where salesmen will be on duty all day Sunday and during the week.

A tremendous amount of property has been sold in Alta-Canyada. The tendency seems to be to build in the highlands, within thirty-five or forty minutes drive from Los Angeles, up where life is freer, the air clearer, and home life more of a home life, where pines, redwoods, firs and flowers mingle their rustic charms.

Each person purchasing one of the Alta-Canyada estates is entitled to the enjoyment to be had in the canyon haunts. A rustic picnic table, cooler, and various rustic benches form inviting necessities that are provided at one of the choice picnic spots in the canyon. This spot is easily accessible by way of a well-trodden trail bounded by high challenging cliffs on one side, where giant sycamores and oaks cling for a foothold and overshadow the path, and by the winding, laughing stream on the other, crossing the stream at intervals and taking its way on the other side, and ever and anon leading back to the opposite bank, as if the person who first trod this path spent his time in visiting interesting turns and curves in its route.

Everyone who comes to Alta-Canyada perforce mentions the magnificent spectacle of hills, valleys and winding boulevards, tracing their way to the very portals of the Pacific, where the battle-ships may be seen at anchor, and the shores of Catalina faintly rising from the distant horizon line.

Leading down over the Verdugo hills, Flintridge, Glendale, Pasadena, Los Angeles and many other cities and towns, one realizes that 2,000 feet, the altitude at which Alta-Canyada rests, is indeed an advantage and asset, when such a view is made possible.

CALIFORNIA OPENS TENDERFOOT'S EYES

By JOHN C. WETMORE

During February, March and April of this year 32,730 new passenger cars were sold in Southern California, a gain of about 80 per cent over last year. Los Angeles county bought 24,889 of them, of which Los Angeles city itself is credited with the purchase of 13,668.

To the outside world these figures will tell an eye-opening tale of how big and wonderful this motor mart has become and what the rapid year by year increases in automobile buying will ultimately mean to the motor car manufacturing industry.

It is, however, the new comer, who perhaps best can appreciate the magnitude and rapid growth of this fastest-growing section of Uncle Sam's domain. He sees for himself in the city itself with its gigantic business center, its great buildings already built and in the process of erection, its crowded streets, and its vast residential section how big Los Angeles really is.

Most of all this looking into the future has emphasized to him in vacant lands everywhere on the plains, in the valleys and on the hillsides building sites in abundance to choose from for the location of homes in the midst of a veritable checkerboard of fine automobile roads.

All this time home seekers are pouring in by the thousands daily, who have made their first Southern California visit the winter before and are returning to enjoy the balmy year-round climate and the scenery of this heaven-blessed, beauty-spot of the United States.

If he be a follower of motoring as a sport or automobiles as a trade such a "tenderfoot" should surely not be blamed for doing a little forecasting of his own that may even open the eyes of "native sons" to whom it is all an old story, to the automobile business, future of their wonderful "sunkist" land; for in Southern California a motor car must be bought for every home.

Wag is now actually one of us—an out-and-out far westerner, a property owner and a dweller in our midst; in fact a real Californian.

Right after the farewell dinner the old Motor club gave him at the Hotel Astor on June 4th—one of those memorable banquets that New York automobile row once in a while gives to fleeting favorites of the Fred J. Wagner brand—Wag headed for the Golden West.

This time it is for good. As soon as his furniture arrives he will take possession of his beautiful orange ranch at Covina and proceed to grow up with the country. California has learned to love Wag during all these racing years that he has crossed the continent and waved the checkered flag at the Pacific coast speedways. His coming will add even more sunshine to California, where a thousand glad hands are outstretched to welcome Wag and Mrs. Wag and greet them as "home folks" from the start.

THE "TROUBLE SHOOTER"

Shows How to Adjust and Tune up
Motor for the Season's Running.

By E. H. SCOTT

This article gives practical, step-by-step instructions to the motorist who wants to reduce his repair bills, get more power from his motor, and eliminate trouble during the coming touring season.

The Brakes—Their Care and Adjustment

There are at least two good reasons why you should test your brakes regularly and give them proper care. The first reason is that people WILL step off the sidewalk and never look where they are going, and if your brakes are not adjusted properly, there is going to be an accident. Then there is the careless, reckless motorist who takes corners at an excessive speed, and rarely slows down or stops at crossroads unless there is an officer there to force him to obey the rules of the road. You are liable at any time to meet one of this class of driver, and to save your car and perhaps your life, it will be necessary for you to be able to stop in a few feet. If your brakes are not adjusted properly, you may find at the critical moment that they will not hold, and another preventable accident has occurred.

The second reason is that improperly adjusted brakes will cause the rear tires to wear very rapidly. Sometimes one brake band or shoe wears a trifle faster than the other, with the result that most of the braking is being done by one wheel, causing the tire on it to wear rapidly. When the brakes act unequally, it makes the car liable to skid very easily, because the wheel that brakes first forms a pivot for the car to swing on. Play safe and make it a practice to test your brakes as soon as you leave the garage each day to see that they act promptly. Once a month check them up as shown below, to see that both wheels brake together.

Brake adjustments may easily be made if possible consult the instruction book you received with your car. If it is not available then the following instructions will show you what to do. First securely chock up the front wheels so that they will not move, then jack up both rear wheels, using a box at one side and the jack at the other. Now see that when the brakes are in the "off" position, both wheels revolve FREELY. If they appear to bind at all, slack off the adjustment. Now start the engine, throw out the clutch and engage high gear, and with the clutch engaged, speed up the engine to a moderate speed, then throw out the clutch and apply the brakes. Have someone watch the rear wheels to see that both wheels stop TOGETHER, and that they stop as soon as the brake is applied. If one wheel continues to revolve longer than the other, tighten the adjustment on the wheel that does not stop, until both wheels stop together, yet revolve quite FREELY when the brakes are off. Test both foot and hand brakes separately in this way.

When you believe you have the brakes adjusted correctly, take the car out on the road and test to make sure that they act promptly, yet are not dragging. First test to see that the brakes act promptly. When you are sure of this, drive the car for about two miles at a fair rate of speed, but do not use the brakes. Get down and feel the brake drums. If they are hot, the adjustment is too tight, slack off a trifle. According to tests made by the manufacturers of brake linings, a car with brakes properly adjusted should be able to stop in 10 ft. going at a speed of 10 miles an hour, in 21 ft. going at 15 miles an hour, or in 37 ft. going at 20 miles an hour.

If the brakes chatter or squeak when applied, it is a sign that the linings are glazed or the surface gritty. If the brakes slip and refuse to hold properly even after adjusting as far as possible, the linings may be worn out or covered with oil or grease. In any case, whether they squeak, chatter or slip, remove the brake bands and clean the linings thoroughly with some kerosene or gasoline and a stiff brush. If the linings are worn badly, the bands or brake shoes will have to be re-lined.

Keep all brake connections well lubricated. Be particularly careful to screw down the grease cups on the tubes of brake shafts attached to the rear axle, or water and grit will work in and cause the shaft to rust, with the result that the brakes will work stiffly and will eventually refuse to release and cause the wheels to lock. When this happens, you have several hours dirty work to do that could have been avoided if you had given the grease cups on brake shaft tubes a turn down at regular intervals, and in addition you will scrape off about 500 miles from the life of the tire when it skidded.

Learn to use the brakes properly. A good driver reduces the speed of the car by closing the throttle as he approaches the point at which he wishes to stop, causing the car to practically glide to a stop and requiring just a touch of the brakes to bring it to a standstill.

ATTENTION IS CALLED TO THE LIBERAL VALUES OFFERED IN THE SHOPPING SECTION

PIANO EXCHANGE MANAGER LIKES SHOPPING PLAN

Mr. Brown of the Piano Exchange, 112 West Broadway, said to a representative of the Glendale Daily Press:

"We are very gratified with the results which seem to have come to us through the medium of the Glendale Press Shopping Section. From the time the Press came out on Saturday until Tuesday morning of this week we were able to do an average week's business. Our corporation is highly elated with the prospects for a large piano business in the city of Glendale.

"We have really surpassed all expectations and I feel that this can be attributed in a great measure to the fact that we are availing ourselves of this Monday shopping campaign now being carried on so successfully by the Press.

The first advertisement that we placed in the shopping section of the Press brought direct results. I questioned one of my customers who had just signed a contract for a four hundred dollar instrument and found that he had read our advertisement in the Press, and had come directly to us to make his purchase. He is now on our list of many delighted patrons, the proud possessor of a real piano at the right price.

"We are charging no exorbitant prices for our goods and we give for the asking a ten-year guarantee on any instrument in our stock. We can sell you one piano or a carload. Our men are experts in the highest sense of the word. They eat pianos. They sleep pianos and they live pianos. The men employed by us are schooled in the piano business and can tell you the pedigree of any piano by looking at it, and in most cases they can give you any information on a piano that you may want if you will just tell them the name of the piano.

"Bank Clearing houses handle in great quantities and our corporation, which is a piano clearing house, handles pianos by the whole sale, and at low figures to any one wishing to purchase the best instrument for the least money."

Mr. Brown is very desirous of meeting the many music teachers of Glendale and vicinity, and he gives assurance of having an attractive proposition to offer them if they will call in and have a chat with him. The office and Glendale branch of this corporation is located at 112 West Broadway. Visitors and music lovers are also cordially invited to come in and look over our stock.

RADIO SCHOONER TO TOUCH NEAR NORTH POLE

Radio broadcasting from near the North Pole, think of it! That's what Dr. Donald B. MacMillan proposes to do. He has an 89-foot schooner, the Bowdoin, and he will fit it out not only with a complete radio receiving apparatus but also with 500-watt transmitter, with which he proposes to transmit every week a 500-word message to be used in publications of the United States.

Dr. MacMillan, who was formerly a professor at Bowdoin College and was first induced to go to the Arctic by Peary and incidentally accompanied Peary on the expedition on which Peary reached the pole and has been back to the Arctic seven times since, was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, March 23, by U. J. ("Sport") Herrmann, who incidentally is the owner of the Chicago Radio Show, one of the owners of the Boston Red Sox, and a well-known Chicago yachtsman. This dinner was a private affair, attended by prominent naval officers and city officials.

During his talk Dr. MacMillan told of the hardships of the Arctic. He said that the greatest hardship is not, as is commonly supposed, the intense cold—which sends the mercury sometimes as low as 60 degrees below zero—that it is not the privations (for on one expedition, and at low figures to any one wishing to purchase the best instrument for the least money."

Mr. Brown is very desirous of meeting the many music teachers of Glendale and vicinity, and he gives assurance of having an attractive proposition to offer them if they will call in and have a chat with him. The office and Glendale branch of this corporation is located at 112 West Broadway. Visitors and music lovers are also cordially invited to come in and look over our stock.

tion which Captain MacMillan commanded, he demonstrated that he and his crew could live for a year on nothing but the food which sustains the Eskimos—but that the greatest hardship is the awful solitude, everything going out and nothing coming in. Mr. U. J. Herrmann, who from the start has been intensely interested in radio, inquired why he, MacMillan, did not take along a radio set. Dr. MacMillan replied that it would take up too much space. There developed a considerable discussion of just what radio would do, in which discussion Dr. MacMillan became greatly interested. As an outcome, he arranged to install both sending and receiving sets aboard his ship, the Bowdoin, and converted the entire forward end of the forecastle into a radio room.

MacMillan takes with him, installed in the forward part of the ship, a Zenith "long distance" standard broadcast receiving set with a wave length range of from 150 to 900 meters, and equipped with three-stage amplifier and loud speaking apparatus, as well as a Zenith long wave receiving set with a maximum wave length of 20,000 meters. With these two sets reception will be possible of not only amateur telegraph and phone stations and radiophone broadcast stations, but also naval and commercial trans-oceanic stations from which press reports, time signals, weather forecasts, etc., can be secured.

The transmitting equipment consists of a Zenith 500-cycle interrupted continuous wave set, using 250-watt transmitter tubes and the Armstrong Regenerative circuit. This apparatus is mounted very compactly in semi-panel form with all necessary meters, and is supplied with current by two gas engine driven Delco generator units entirely separate from the regular power plant of the ship.

The ship's antenna is of peculiar construction, due to the fact that the Bowdoin depends for part of its motive power on sails and is of comparatively short length. A stem to stern antenna is used, passing over the main mast and foremast, the lead-in dropping through the foredeck to the radio quarters. In order to insure good ground, steel and copper plates have been riveted to the hull and in addition, connections have been made to the propeller shaft through the engine and to the supply of coal which is carried partly as ballast and for emergency use.

Mr. MacMillan will take with him as wireless operator Donald H. Mix of Bristol, Connecticut. Mix was selected by Captain MacMillan from five men who were chosen by Mr. Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the American Radio Relay League.

Realizing the tremendous interest which the use of radio on an expedition of this character would arouse in the public mind, Maxim sent out a request for volunteers to all the members of the American Radio Relay League. Hundreds responded. Not only technical ability as an operator and the ability to withstand hardships were requisites, but in particular the faculty for making oneself congenial among a small crew of men on an ice-bound ship. Dr. MacMillan's crew consists of only seven men.

Mix represents Captain MacMillan's choice from among some of the best wireless operators in the country.

Once a week Mix will transmit from the Bowdoin a five hundred word story of Arctic adventure and will transmit also diagrams of all new lands and harbors and lands found and charted.

At such times as it has been prearranged for Mix to attempt to get his wireless message through, Hiram Percy Maxim will issue a request for all amateurs who are members of the league to stand by and tune in for station WNP. The sending station on the Bowdoin has been assigned by the government the call letters WNP, "wireless north pole." The government has assigned wave lengths of 200, 300 and 400 meters and has also given permission for station WNP to use whatever wave length it may find necessary for experimental purposes.

It may be interesting to figure out just how Uncle Sam would move against an ice-bound ship in the Arctic, hundreds of miles from civilization. If its wave length were found to interfere with that of other sending stations, the American broadcasting station which will be used to send messages to Dr. MacMillan is the new Zenith-Edgewater Beach hotel broadcasting casting station WJAZ, which incidentally is the most powerful broadcasting station in the country, having 4,000 volts and 10 kilowatt output. This station will not only be used to give Dr. MacMillan and his crew of seven entertainment and news of the day, but it will also be used by the families of Dr. MacMillan and his crew when they desire to send messages to those aboard the Bowdoin in the frozen north.

There is a period of 141 days in the Arctic during which a message sent at midnight must pass through hundreds of miles of sunlight before it reaches darkness. It will be interesting to see what effect these peculiar conditions of the Arctic have on radio communication. Up to the present time it has been thought that the so-called auroral band would act as a powerful deterrent in transmitting radio messages. At all events, there is no record of a message ever having been transmitted from the north through it. It will be interesting to learn to what extent the auroral band will interfere, and it is quite possible that scientific data of great importance will be gathered about the Aurora Borealis, which has always been a mystery. Never before have all the amateurs of the country focused their receiving sets upon a single isolated station in the frozen north. It will be interesting to learn what portions of the country receive these messages clearly and what portions do not receive them at all.

No end of interesting material can be developed to supplement the facts above cited, particularly regarding the nature of the news stories which MacMillan will send out, the walrus hunt, the Eskimos dancing to the music of the United States, et cetera, et cetera. It will be interesting also to let one's imagination play on such situations as the broadcasting of the returns of the presidential election and their almost instantaneous reception. Even though MacMillan and his crew of seven men will at that time very likely be within a few miles of the North Pole, they will have the news at practically the same instant that it is being received by their friends lounging at their ease in their downtown clubs.

MacMillan intends to be in the Arctic only 14 months on this trip, but incidentally when he headed the Crocker Land Expedition in 1913, he intended to be gone only one year, his ship became ice-bound and he could not get free nor back to civilization until 1917.

Curing your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

Dear Mr. Barnes: I have followed with interest your intelligent suggestions on how to cure golf faults and would like to ask for a little help myself. It is almost impossible for me to hit a ball properly with wood clubs. I smother the shot through wrong movement of the wrists. The left hand does not appear to turn over enough on the backstroke, so that it goes out stiff and straight. I play my irons well, but the ball I drive always has a low flight. If you will explain about how much and when the left hand begins to turn I think it will help me. Also in bringing the club back, should it be brought back on a straight line? R. J.

Ans: I rather think that your trouble is due to the fact that you are gripping with both hands too far over toward the right, that is your left hand is probably too much on top of the shaft, and your right too much under. If you are doing this, the tendency will be strong for you to tuck your left elbow in to your side as you come down, and for the right wrist to roll over to the left. When the clubhead reaches the ball, the face instead of having a slope backward is actually tilted a little beyond, even beyond the perpendicular.

The grip that I recommend has the "Y" formed by the space between the thumbs and forefingers pointing toward the right shoulder. But to correct your trouble, you might grip with the back of the left hand almost facing the hole, that is, so that when you look down at your hands, you see only the first two knuckles of the left. You may also find it helpful to use a more upright swing. And on the downswing, practice making an effort to pull from the shoulder with the left arm.

Don't worry too much about how your wrists turn on the backswing, other than to see that they are pretty well under the shaft at the top. If you grip properly and take the club back right, you needn't stop to worry just how your wrists are working. In taking the club back, it ought to swing in side the line of play extended on back through the ball, and not outside.

Oregon Trail Pageant to Be Held July 3 and 4

[By Associated Press] LA GRANDE, Ore., June 23. — Crossing the Blue Mountains by the first wagon trail of pioneers 80 years ago, and completion of the Blue Mountains link of the Old Oregon trail, are to be commemorated by the Old Oregon Trail pageant at Top O' Blue Mountains, near here, July 3 and 4. Presence of President Warren G. Harding, which has been promised in White House announcements, has given the celebration a national aspect.

Governor Walter M. Pierce of Oregon has announced his intention of being present, and governors of adjacent states have been invited to attend.

Committees of leading citizens of eastern Oregon have been busy for months in arranging for the pageant, and a wealth of historical material, in the shape of original "prairie schooners," oxen yokes, costumes and other equipment actually used by the pioneers, has been assembled to be used in the pageant which the promoters aim to be as realistic as it is possible to achieve.

A vast natural amphitheatre at Top O' Blue Mountains capable of accommodating thousands of spectators and affording a huge arena for staging the "wild west" show amid genuine settings, will be the scene of the pageant. Performers, experienced as a result of participating in a similar pageant last year at Baker, Ore., will take part, and real Umatilla Indians from Pendleton have promised their services. To give added realism not only the performers will be attired in pioneer style, but suggestion has been made that spectators also deck themselves in old-fashioned togs.

Sheriffs of Union, Umatilla, Baker and Malheur counties have announced plans to handle the crowds and check any tendency toward lawlessness. They have planned to set up a detention chain, a heavy steel chain stretched between two trees to which obstreperous persons will be handcuffed to keep them out of further mischief.

An all-day and all-night old-fashioned barbecue has been announced as one of the features of the pageant.

A bill introduced in the New York state legislature would require every motor car owner to secure within 90 days after passage, a certificate that guarantees the possessor to be the legal owner of the car. The purpose of the bill is to make it more difficult to own a stolen car, thus making it more difficult to sell stolen cars, and in turn, crippling the business. The results, however, will be negligible unless other states pass similar bills; for should this bill pass it would simply eliminate New York as a market for stolen cars. AUTO NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

Nineteen fatal accidents in the state of Connecticut during April, as against 16 during the first three months of 1923, has started the state police on a crusade to fight the attitude of irresponsibility which is being displayed by a very large percentage of the newer drivers.

GOING EAST? GET NEW GUIDE BOOK

Motorists who are planning vacation tours during the summer months will be pleased to know that the 1923 Associated Tours Guide, the official road book compiled and published by the Automobile Club of America, is now ready for distribution.

By following the carefully selected itineraries and clearly defined road maps with which the Guide's 104 pages are filled, summer vacationists are enabled to tour by motor through the most charming sections of the eastern United States and Canada to seaside, mountain and country resorts. All tours in the Guide are compiled with a view to scenic charm; the roads mapped are the best stretches of hard highway that the country affords.

For transcontinental motor tourists there is a double page Atlantic to Pacific road map showing the several routes across the United States, accompanied by complete itineraries for this increasingly popular trip. For those visiting the New England country there is a map of the recently adopted road marking system. A large folding road map of the entire country east of Chicago accompanies the Guide.

A feature of the Associated Tours Guide that motorists particularly appreciate is that the itineraries are arranged to allow for logical stopping places at the end of each day's run at towns where accommodations may be readily secured. Synopses of state motor laws, ferry schedules and lists of good hotels and garages also go to increase the Guide's usefulness to the automobilist.

For the accommodation of car owners the guide will be distributed through local news dealers, book stores and drugstores in all parts of the country or may be obtained by remitting fifty cents to cover cost and postage to the Automobile Club of America, 247 West 54th St., New York City.

WHY THE BATTERY WIRE IS HEAVY

Why is the battery wire to the starter switch, and thence to the starter motor always the heaviest wire of the electrical system? You have perhaps been puzzled as to why the wiring for the ignition and lighting circuits are usually 10, 12 or 14 B & S gage, while the wire from the battery to the starter motor is a stout cable. The explanation is that for the starter motor to crank over a stiff engine a peak of 400 amperes may be drawn from the battery with a fall of voltage depending upon the size of the cable and its length. A loss in wattage (which is the measure of electrical power) may equal one-seventh horse power at the moment of peak discharge from the battery. The importance of eliminating all unnecessary resistance in the battery starter wiring, therefore, is readily seen.

HEALTH CRUSADING

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

Of interest and inspiration as showing marvels that may be wrought in community health improvement is a paper read at a medical meeting by Dr. B. B. Bagby of West Point, Va. In this paper were recounted some of Dr. Bagby's medical experiences since he began practice in West Point fourteen years ago, and more particularly the virtual disappearance of certain summer diseases which were then prevalent in that small southern town.

When Dr. Bagby settled there it was the boast of local officials that West Point was the healthiest town in Virginia. Actually it was most insanitary. Not one dwelling place was completely screened, modern plumbing and drainage were conspicuous by their absence, scavenger work was done by the local dairyman, who went directly from that work to milking his cows, bottling and delivering milk.

Consequently Dr. Bagby was hardly surprised to find that of the patients seen by him during the five summer months of his first year in West Point—1909—a large proportion suffered from diseases attributable to faulty sanitation. He had seven cases of typhoid fever, fifteen of cholera infantum and nearly one hundred cases of malaria, out of a total of 158 town patients.

Thereupon he began some health crusading.

His first move was to preach the gospel of screening as a protective measure against disease transmission by flies and mosquitoes. Also, he urged fly and mosquito extermination, a bettering of the milk supply and of the water supply and drainage improvements.

One after another the reforms advocated were brought about, through the co-operative zeal of town and state authorities. So that Dr. Bagby was able to inform his medical audience, reviewing the results obtained in the short period of less than fifteen years:

"Now, 80 per cent of our milk is put up under thoroughly sanitary conditions. Even the poorest negro tenements of our town now have good window and door screens. The town and state authorities spent about $6000 a few years ago to drain our marshes, and there has not been a single case of malaria contracted in our town since that time.

"Four years ago our town put in a complete water and sewerage system, and the law now compels every house to connect with this system. Our water comes from artesian wells about 400 feet deep and is almost sterile. The improvements in the health of our town have paid us (the citizens) many times over for the money expended in putting in the water works and draining our marshes."

In fact, though his practice had increased with the passage of time, Dr. Bagby throughout last summer had only one West Point patient suffering from dysentery, and not a single case of malaria, typhoid fever, or cholera infantum. Neither had Dr. A. S. Hudson, West Point's only other physician.

Moreover, again to quote Dr. Bagby himself:

"I have not found a case of hookworm in five years. When I began to practice medicine, in 1904, some sections of King and Queen county showed a hookworm infection of nearly 100 per cent among the school children, and many adults were sallow, anaemic, sick and thin. Thanks to the state board of health, these same people are now healthy, prosperous and happy."

All this truly spells progress. It demonstrates, too, the soundness of the often reiterated but too often unheeded claim of health authorities that public health is a realizable ideal, so far as concerns the prevention of many common infectious diseases.

Not a few other communities, for that matter, can boast a record akin to West Point's in the way of health improvement. But in not a few the need for similar crusading against this or that preventable malady is about as urgent as it was years ago.

TARGET SHOOTING IS REAL SPORT

It is certain that small-bore, low power target shooting is going to become more popular, not only for indoor sport and practice in the winter, but outdoors at ranges up to as far as 250 yards. The Springfield, B. S. A. and Winchester rifles made for this shooting today are almost the equals of the expensive hand-made rifles, and rim-fire ammunition is available now from all the makers that will do wonderful work. As time passes, every neighborhood should have its shooters' organizations, and the club should have its small-bore range. Those who have never tried this small-bore game, whether hunters or military shots, will be surprised at its possibilities, once they fire a fine, 22-calibre match rifle.

Bolt rifles are slowly encroaching on the field formerly almost dominated by lever action Winchester and others. The Savage 1920 bolt gun is now made in two calibres, the .300 a winning rival of the old .303 Savage, and this gun is almost as light and handy as the model '94 Winchester carbine, which in 30-30 calibre has been so popular. Hunters and woodsmen will find out the advantages of the former.

Twenty years from now hunters will be using these and other bolt action, as well as target shooters. Matches now show a tendency to permit any reasonable change in barrel, sights and stock of the military rifles as issued. Building of rifles based on military and similar actions, the other details, even perhaps calibres, to suit the needs and fancies of the individual, is bound to be a growing business.—Sportsman's Digest.

GIANT ZEPPELINS MAY SOON OPERATE ACROSS ATLANTIC

[By Associated Press]

LONDON, June 23.—Details of the first Atlantic airship service between Spain and Argentina have just been made public by the London Daily Chronicle, which says that it may soon be possible to bridge the 5,000 miles between the two continents in three and a half days. The service will operate between Seville and Buenos Aires, and Zeppelin aircraft will be used. There will be terminal airbases, mooring masts, repair sheds and hydrogen factories at Seville and at Buenos Aires. In addition, emergency landing grounds will be laid out at the Canary Islands and at Cordoba, in the Argentine.

On the American side of the Atlantic the hangars will be made on a revolving principle, because of the variability of the wind. Four airships are being built to inaugurate the scheme, and it is anticipated that service will begin next summer. It also is probable that arrangements will be made to link up Seville direct with London by an airplane service.

The airships, fitted with nine engines, each developing 400 horsepower, will carry 40 passengers and 11 tons of mails and merchandise. There will be two simultaneous flights a week in each direction, and the time taken to cross the Atlantic will be three days and 16 hours. Passengers will have all the comforts of an Atlantic liner, without the disadvantage of sea sickness.

The ships will be a speed of 82 miles an hour. Zeppelin pilots who have not less than 1,000 successful flights to their credit will be engaged to operate the craft. Each airship will carry six pilots and a commander.

Why Dead Timber At Black Butte?

BEND, Ore., June 23.—(United Press).—Visible with the melting of the winter's snow, a natural belt of dead timber about 50 feet in width surrounds Black Butte this year. Black Butte, in the vicinity of Mr. Shasta, is visible for many miles, and is a landmark throughout all of southwestern Oregon.

ber to die in the one belt around the mountain is puzzling lumbermen. It is possible, however, that the trees have died as the result of an attack by bark beetles.

Listening in on Eve

HELPFUL MEN FOLKS

"They do it on purpose," declared the pale and haggard housewife. "They act that way just so we wives and mothers and sisters will do every last thing ourselves rather than rashly invite their assistance."

"Who has done what now?" asked the housewife from across the hall, who had just cleaned five closets.

"I thought my son Artemus was too young to be so scheming," proceeded the haggard housewife sadly. "I considered that he was still, so to speak, a babe, and that when I requested him to get a kitchen chair and lift down the living room curtains, which I wished to send to the cleaners, all would be well and not a ripple would be caused on the surface of our placid existence. That shows all I know about the inner working of my son's mind."

"Had it been his father at home I should have known better than to mention removing the curtains. Instead, I should have asked him why he didn't take a nice walk down to the lake or go play golf or get shaved, or something to remove him from the house—but there was Artemus, home on his vacation, aged twenty and perfectly agile."

"Sure," said Artemus at my request, untangling, uncoiling and elevating himself from the easy chair where he was reading. Stretching on upward into the thin air of the heights, Artemus simply raised a hand and in a free and easy manner began removing the curtain rods. I had forgotten how amazingly tall he is. As he took each one off he just dropped it in spite of my twitterings and cries of protest.

"One rod tipped over the smoking stand and the glass ash receiver crashed tinklingly against a brass claw foot of a chair. The second fell athwart a table, knocking over a vase, the water spilling nicely onto a redbound book which incriminated the linen table scarf. The third hit the inquisitive family cat on the head. The fourth sped straight to the mantel mirror and neatly cracked it."

"Gosh!" said Artemus, interestedly, at that. "Now, how did that ever happen?"

"If you'd taken a chair as I told you to, I said snappily, 'this wouldn't have been!'"

"But why should I stand on a chair?" patiently asked Artemus, "when I am tall enough to reach without it? Zat all?"

"Well," I acknowledged, as I slipped the last soiled curtain off the rods, "seeing you are here you might as well put the empty rods back for me!"

"Now, why," argued Artemus, "put up the empty rods before the curtains are cleaned?"

"Because," I informed him, "by that time half of the rods would have mysteriously disappeared and the little thingamados that screw on the ends would be lost and gone forever!"

"Gee!" said Artemus at that, "I wonder where I did put those screw things when I took them off!"

"Yes—in that short time they were gone. And you know you never can buy new ones that will screw on old rods, never! Too full for words, I grabbed up the curtains and stalked out. When I came back Artemus had taken down all the curtains in the dining room, the hall, and the library.

"Why? I habbled, ready to tear my hair, 'why have you completely wrecked the house, dearie?' It looks as though a flock of elephants had charged through the place. Anyhow, those curtains don't go to the curtain place—they are done at home and the laundress won't be here for a week!"

"I thought I might as well make a good job of it," pointed out Artemus. "It is too bad that I knocked that photograph record onto the piano, but I guess you can rub the dent off or something—and maybe you'd better do something about the canary. His cage got tangled up in a curtain and kind of tipped over and I guess he's flown out into the back of the house somewhere—oh, were all the windows up? Dad's jar of smoking tobacco spilled over back of the radiator and I expect his pipe is smashed, for I heard it sort of crack—and when I stepped back I must have stepped right into the rubber plant, because it seems kind of queer—but I wanted to save you from wrestling over taking down those curtains—it's no job for a woman!"

"Oh, well," said the lady who had cleaned five closets and found moths in three of them, after a minute in which they had just looked hopelessly at each other, "if it isn't one thing it's another in this world!"

TIRED FEET TO REST ON SEATS

[By Associated Press]

BOISE, Idaho, June 23.—The tired, train-traveler, who under an order issued by the state in 1918, was prohibited from placing his feet on an unoccupied seat in a passenger car, again may exercise that privilege in Idaho with the passing of the "precautionary period," according to David Burrell, state commissioner of public welfare.

The measure prohibiting a passenger from placing himself in the stretched-out position whereby his feet were supported by the seat opposite him was ordered in effect five years ago by state officials, who contended it was in line with other movements to eliminate "health hazards," while the influenza movement was in full sway.

HERE'S A REAL BUYING TEST

Observing the performance of various cars on steep hills is not always conclusive. With the throttle wide open an engine will make sufficient noise to drown other sounds from a car which may be evidence of various defects. The better plan is to observe the cars when they are getting a running start on the hill. It is surprising in a test of this sort to note the striking difference in the running of various makes. The only caution is to be sure to base your conclusions on averages, rather than individual cars. The human equation must also be taken into consideration.

COMBINATION OF MOUNTAIN AND SEA- SHORE IS OFFERED

One of the Most Unique Trips Imaginable Has Been Prepared This Week for the Motorists of Glendale and Vicinity

TOUR TOPANGO CANYON, THE BEAUTIFUL

This Jaunt Also Provides Drive Along the Ventura Highway; One of the Finest Roads in Southern California

We're going to do two things this week, folks—enjoy a trip combining the valley and the seashore and celebrate the opening of the new concrete highway between Santa Monica and Topango canyon.

The part of the San Fernando valley that will be traveled is unusually beautiful at this time of the year. It is green and inviting. The fruits of various kinds are getting close to the harvesting stage and they show what is really possible in that section along the horticultural line.

That stretch of beach road between Santa Monica and Topango canyon has been a nightmare to the motorists of Southern California for years. Those who have traveled over it have noticed that gradually it has become worse and worse, until it was almost impassable. Several months ago the improvement of this stretch started. It has been rushed on account of the unusual travel demand for that highway. During the construction of that road travel between Topango and Santa Monica was diverted to the dirt road, about seven miles in length through the Palisades country. This was very unsatisfactory, but the motorists of Southern California realized that it was only temporary. In other words, it was the "best temporary route."

Now the new highway is completed and the formal opening will be held next Sunday—in good time for the touring season of 1923. The motorists of Glendale who follow the Press trip suggestion this week will have the pleasure of assisting in the christening of this road.

Clouds have hovered over Glendale this week and on one occasion a "smart sprinkle" of rain was felt, but that need not hinder the motorist from throwing a few things in the family car and getting away from the familiar scenes. The sun is shining again, and with its rays comes the desire to be away. Why not answer the call? Why not try playing for a few hours, a horse business worries and household drudgeries for a spell. You'll be a better man or woman for having done so.

The trip will be out through the San Fernando valley, south through the Topango canyon to the seashore and back via the beach and Hollywood roads. It is a beautiful trip and one that can easily be made in a day with all kinds of time for stops for lunch and to see the beautiful views along the way.

From Broadway and Brand start out West Broadway and continue to the San Fernando boulevard, where turn right (north) and continue through the rapidly growing subdivisions and on to Burbank. At Burbank turn left (west) at the bank building and continue over the railroad tracks and out over the cultivated fields and up the beautiful Dark Canyon hills and over into Cahuenga pass.

Turn right (north) at Cahuenga pass and run out past Universal City, continuing out along the unsurpassed hills that constitute the southern boundary of the wonderful San Fernando valley. There are quite a number of points of unusual interest along this highway, which is the Los Angeles-Ventura state road, and one of the finest boulevards in the state. After emerging from the curved section of highway that winds in and out among the hills and past the entrance of Laurel canyon, the beautiful Hollywood Golf club grounds are passed, this being located on the slopes of the hills to the south of the highway. The golf club has been in existence only a year or so, and already it has been converted into a sea of green with the gorgeous clubhouse nestling cozily in the hills to the south of the course.

Continuing out over this highway, every foot of which is as smooth as a table, the motorist will pass the far-famed Tuck-a-nu-la hog ranch, which raises more blue-ribbon hogs than any ranch in the state. Continuing westward the tourist will pass hundreds of acres of highly cultivated fields. There are walnut groves, apricot orchards—the most beautiful eye has ever seen—mammoth patches of corn, beets, etc., beautiful little farm houses surrounded by their family gardens and groves of various types of trees, and everything that goes to make the ideal farm—the country home of heart's desire. Encino acres, which is known throughout the whole of California, is passed a short distance beyond. There are hundreds of acres of exceedingly productive land in this tract, many of which already have been set out to oranges, lemons and other deciduous fruits. A little farther on the Adhior dairy, which is noted for its wonderful product,

SEVERAL 'DON'TS' FOR MOTOR TOURIST

Are you or your friends planning to take any long tours? Do you know all there is to know about long distance touring, or would you like to absorb a few words of warning in regard to such long trips from the touring bureau of the Auto Club of Southern California?

Here are some of the 'don'ts' from the club, and every one of them is important, whether you are taking a long trip or a short trip, in regard to the equipment of your car and person:

Don't allow the car to be without provisions or food of some sort at any time.

Don't fail to have warm clothing in the outfit. The high altitudes in the west are cold and the dry air is penetrating.

Don't forget the yellow goggles. In driving west you have to face the sun all afternoon, and the glare is hard on the eyes.

Don't ford water without first wading through it.

Don't wait until your gasoline is almost gone before filling up. There might be a delay or it might not be obtained at the next point at which it can be secured, no matter how little you need.

Don't allow your water canteens to be other than full of fresh water and keep them filled. The burst of a water hose or a sudden leak in your radiator might occur between garages.

The entire expense of a car and four passengers from coast to coast, a distance of approximately 3,500 miles, should not at any time exceed $5 per day per passenger, says the Auto Club. This sum will include everything except tire expense and unforeseen breakdowns. It includes gasoline, oil and all provisions, but places no restrictions upon the amount or quality of provisions, and will easily cover the requirements of the average person.

TWO TRAFFIC TRICKS

If, while waiting at a crossing for the stop-go sign to be turned in your favor, you fear that the engine may stall, let it run fast, but evenly. Don't race it periodically. This gives the officer the impression that you are impatient; and he'll be inclined to give all other traffic preference.

When steering sharply in order to avoid hitting something always apply the brakes at the same time. Steering can be used as a safety measure, but don't depend upon it. Stopping and steering combined will produce best results.

'V. B.' COMES HOME WITH FISH YARN

Talk about trout! V. B. Stone, deputy city engineer, has a fish story that will knock a whole lot of them for "a row of garbage pails."

"V. B.," you know, along with Mrs. Stone and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Forsythe, an artist of Glendale, returned June 14 from a two weeks' trip to Big Bear. Every moment of that time was fast and furious, according to this engineer man. He says that during that time his party caught 33 trout, the aggregate weight of which was 75 pounds. The largest, a beauty weighing 6 1/2 pounds, was, of course, caught by Mister Stone. That's nothing but fair—he's telling the story!

The champion "kicker" at Bartlett's camp assured Engineer Stone that he and his party had made the best record thus far this season. This "kicker" carried a blue ribbon, so his assertions must be true.

The largest one caught by Stone was so big that the anglers association at Big Bear mistook it for a tuna and insisted that Stone was eligible to membership to the California Tuna club.

Stone claims he has photographs to prove his assertions.

WHAT ABOUT THE ANTI-PISTOL LAW?

It is a well-known fact that the crooks and thugs of this country will welcome a law that deprives the law-abiding citizen of defensive weapons. It is a safe conclusion also that this same class has no intention of obeying such a law. Their business is the evasion of the law and it is hard to believe that they will reform at the passage of this bill.

We are glad to say that the outdoor press has unanimously taken a stand against the anti-pistol agitation. But the press alone cannot accomplish its defeat. The sportsmen of the country must get into the movement and must exert such an influence through their organizations that their representative law makers cannot fail to feel its weight.

The American people cannot afford to see the day when law-abiding citizens, through their loyalty and willingness to obey the laws of their country, are placed entirely at the mercy of the hold-up man and the thug. Hence, it behooves every true sportsman to get busy at once in helping to squelch this latest fad of the would-be reformers.—Sportsman's Digest.

SAD, BUT TRUE
When buying a new car it is well to keep in mind that the beauty of some automobiles is only tin deep.

TAKE CARE WHEN YOU PASS WAGONS

Horses are not ready for the museums yet! Although a lot of motorists seem to think that horse-drawn vehicles belong in side-shows and not on the boulevards, very exciting testimony has just been received by the Auto Club of Southern California from farmers and ranchers to the effect that horses and buggies have rights on the roads of California.

This is a warning to all motorists not to get "fresh" with ranchers driving their teams along country roads in the west, as a large number of these ranchers say that they are going to carry machine power, accurate rifles for the purpose of shooting holes in autoists' tires if they hit the buggies.

It seems that a lot of gay auto drivers have been very careless about hitting ranchers' teams or team-drawn vehicles and then failing to stop and render assistance after the accident. In some cases, sad to relate, the autoist has even twirled his fingers at the irate farmer and gone on his way laughingly. The club is warning you that if this happens again, the farmers say they are going to take some shots at the rear tires of the laughing motorist.

Of course, there is something to be said on both the side of the motorist and the side of the farmer, reports the auto club. Many times a rancher driving a team of horses along the road will bull-headedly refuse to turn out and let the auto go past. Sometimes the rancher continues to drive right down the middle of the road, and refuses to budge. On the other hand, there are many motorists who are very intolerant of horse-drawn vehicles, and push them off the road, if possible, whenever they get a chance.

It is pointed out that horse-drawn vehicles have the same rights to the boulevards as the motorist and that both should get along with brotherly love when they are using the roads of California.

"WATCH YOURSELF"
An enterprising township has erected a pertinent sign at a dangerous point of the highway calling attention to a mirror in which the driver sees himself as he approaches. The sign says "Watch yourself," while the mirror is said to be a surprise to many drivers who imagine they look trustworthy when at the wheel.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Ullman Feature Service)

THERE'S A KICK IN EVERY LINE

Snappy expressions are sometimes seen painted on automobiles that pass through Glendale.

For instance, one little cut-down spiky-looking flivver had the following words painted on the rear end:

"Dangerous, but passable."

Anyone who has toured the country to any extent will realize what expression that means.

Another weather-beaten car, from which the top was missing, had the following "take off" on a popular movie, painted in large letters on its side:

"The Uncovered Wagon."
Another machine, seen here recently, which was void of paint and in every other way looked as though it had for months been sadly neglected, carried the following words:
"Never mind, girls, you'd look like heck, too, if you didn't have any paint."
All of which is probably true.

AUTO OWNERS ARE RESPONSIBLE

Motorists, particularly the newer members of the clan, show a rather warped sense of responsibility. This is especially true in cases where the party who drives is not the owner of the car nor an employee of the owner.

Such drivers are invariably wives of car owners or sons and daughters who are old enough to be legally entitled to drive but not old enough to have a very keen appreciation of the responsibilities which are placed upon anyone who pilots an automobile. The reason is that such drivers feel they can depend upon the owner of the car in event of trouble, and if he is fully insured, "everything will be all right."

This attitude is directly responsible for many of the serious automobile accidents that mar motorizing.

The owner of the car is usually involved technically and must always pay the bill for damages, but he is not held criminally responsible for what happens. He isn't the one who pays the real penalty for carelessness or recklessness.

The most fortunate driver is the one who has no one he thinks he can pass the buck to in event of a mishap with the car, for he then operates the car with a better knowledge of why he should avoid those unthinking acts which result in collisions and fatalities.

ATTEMPT WILL BE MADE TO BREAK ALL OVERLAND RECORDS

Frank Gegoux, in His Car, "Desert Pal," Will Hop Off at 12:01 Sunday Morning on One of the Most Gruelling Contests Ever Held

WILL DRIVE 500 MILES PER DAY

Car Representing Western Auto, Equipped With Rajo Head, Has Been Completely Rebuilt for This Trip; Watch Its Dust

Forty-eight hours of continuous driving without sleep or rest, traveling a thousand miles in two days over roads hazardous and unsafe for speed; driving 500 miles a day for five days thereafter, making the entire trip alone—such are the plans of Frank Gegoux and his car, "Desert Pal."

Leaving Los Angeles at 12:01 a. m. Sunday morning, June 24th, and arriving in New York before 12:01 a. m. Sunday morning, July 1st, seems almost an impossibility, but he is confident that he can accomplish such a feat.

It is indeed a task for a car to make the trip in that limited time with relief drivers along the way, but it seems incredible to believe that one man can make the run in seven days elapsed time, although such is his claim.

"Desert Pal" and its driver, Gegoux, have made these cross-country trips for six consecutive years, each year establishing a better record than the year previous. In 1920, with the roads in a condition bad enough to discourage any driver, he made a complete circle of the states touching every border state from coast to coast and from border to border in thirty-seven days. "Desert Pal" was at that time but a stock Ford, equipped with a "Rajo" cylinder head of standard type. He has since changed the body for the speedster type and the entire car has undergone a complete renovation as well in addition to the "Rajo" head, it is fitted with a counter-balanced crank shaft, nine speed transmission, Yalo oiler, Shur-flo water pump, Hayes disc wheels, Zenith carburetor and Eisman ignition system. The engine has the original 1913 block that has seen over 360,000 miles of service and has never been re-bored.

So confident is Mr. Gegoux that his trip will be a success that he has staked $1,000 as a wager that he will make the trip in seven days. "That the valve-in-head type of motor develops the greatest power and speed is indisputable," says Gegoux, "realizing this, I equipped 'Desert Pal' with what I thought to be the best type overhead valve system procurable for a Ford—a 'Rajo' head. With the aid of this marvelous attachment I am confident that my object will be successfully reached."

Aside from these little "week-end" jaunts every year, Gegoux leads the modest life of that of a reclamation agent in Arizona, where he spends ten months of the year. During two of the summer months, while the Arizona sun zooms the thermometer around 140 degrees, Gegoux and his "Desert Pal" gallop around the states on their vacation.

Few motorists would care to drive through to New York with relief drivers in less than fifteen to twenty days, even business men, but Gegoux says he will make it in seven—and he calls it a pleasure trip.

FAST AMOUNT IN FARM FURS

The value of fur animals and equipment as reported to the government for 1922, was estimated to be about $8,000,000. So far foxes are greatly in the lead as to number and value. Perhaps the figures, as given to the United States department of agriculture, for last year, will be of interest and value: foxes, 231 raisers, 6,720 animals; skunk, 46 raisers, 1,746 animals; coon, 27 raisers, 130 animals; mink, 19 raisers, 70 animals; opossum, 9 raisers, 90 animals; muskrat, 5 raisers, 70 animals.

It is thought that the report for 1922 did not include more than half of those in the business. The reports as sent out were mostly returned but there are many in the business, for some reason, that are slow to advise others—probably afraid the business will be overdone soon. Only five reported as raising muskrat, while it is known that there are scores who either own or control lakes, marshes and swamps where thousands are raised each year.

Fortunes have already been made at fur farming, but the days when live silver foxes sold for several thousand dollars is past. Now that this animal is more reasonable, fur men can engage in the raising without expending a fortune to get started. The better grade of silver foxes are still worth hundreds of dollars. Some begin with cross or red as their habits are the same and after a year or so experience add silvers.—Sportsman's Digest.

The Most Powerful Engine in America

The OLDSMOBILE "8" owner enjoys a motoring experience which you, perhaps, have missed.

Always, at his command, is a tremendous flow of silent power—power to climb steep hills on high; power to plow through sand; power to dash ahead at the traffic signal. The Oldsmobile Eight engine is a marvel.

And every vital chassis part is equally strong and enduring; every part is oversize.

The frame is 7 inches deep, instead of 5 1/2 inches, which is the average. The king bolts are 1 inch in diameter, while the average is 3/4 inch.

The shackle bolts are 3/4 inch—the average is 1/2 inch. The springs are 54 inches long—that's 4 inches longer than the average.

Consider the years of additional life insured by this power and strength. Then examine the unusual beauty and luxury of the body (Oldsmobile is famous for its body designs) and you will be amazed that a car so completely good can be sold for only $1375.

Other Eight Cylinder Models—Sport Roadster, $1625; Super-Sport Touring, $1675; Brougham, $1775; Coupe, $1875; Sedan, $2025. Prices f. o. b. Lansing.

COMBINATION OF SEASHORE AND MOUNTAIN OFFERED TO AUTOIST

is passed, lying on the south side of the road. A short distance beyond this ranch Chalk hills are covered and the motorist will continue along the highway, past the road leading up to Owensmouth and on to the entrance to Topanga canyon, which is marked by signs of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

For a short distance, after turning from the highway, the motorist will cover a good graded and paved road running through practically level country, after which the road will begin the rise. The old motor will show the effects of this increase in grade and will call for a little more gas. From the point the motorist enters the Topanga hills until he emerges at the southern end of the canyon, every foot of the road brings to the motorist a new and even more beautiful scene. The roadway winds round and round, skirting a nose in a hill here and circling an abrupt turn a little farther on. The trip through this canyon is one grand series of surprises, and it more than repays the motorist for his effort in making the jaunt. There are several eating houses in the canyon where the motorist may stop and get a little light refreshments, or, if the traveler has his lunch along, he will find dozens of shady spots where he can partake of the repast, and at the same time take in the surrounding mountain scenery.

Upon emerging on the beach at the southern end of the canyon, the traveler should turn left (east) and continue along the brand new concrete road which has just been completed eastward, past Inceville, the wonderful little moving picture colony, where everything is taken from South Africa scenes to North Pole pictures. The road that runs along the ocean front is a delight, and while traveling along it the motorist will pass a number of small canyons, finally reaching the celebrated Santa Monica canyon, where there is a beach resort, with bathing facilities and the like. After seeing the sights at the mouth of Santa Monica canyon the motorist will continue on to Santa Monica.

From this noted beach resort there are numerous ways to "get home." There is the Sawtelle-Soldiers' Home route, the Wilshire boulevard route, and other less familiar ways. The motorist may hit down to Venice or Ocean Park and from either of these places head homeward. On Sundays and holidays the traffic from these beach towns to Los Angeles is extra heavy and for this reason the start home should be made in pretty good time.

This will be found an ideal one-day trip, taking in both mountains and beaches, and giving the motorist a taste of that outdoor life that is so much sought after.

REO MAKES QUICK JOURNEY FROM SALT LAKE

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—The trip from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City by limited train requires just six minutes under 26 hours. Last Sunday morning a Reo phaeton rolled into the Utah capital with only 25 hours, 41 minutes behind it from this city. It was a new record for automobiles, and lowered the previous, also held by a Reo, by a margin of 54 minutes.

The matter of breaking records seems to have become almost a habit with Reo for it was only a little over three months ago that a Reo established a new record from Los Angeles to Phoenix, Arizona, over the long route via Kingman, Seligman and Prescott, while last year a Reo established a round trip record between Los Angeles and Phoenix, and also set up a new mark from Salt Lake to Los Angeles. Still more recently a Reo touring car was the first to break through the snow barrier across the high Sierras to Reno by way of the difficult Placerville route.

This most recent achievement of the Reo phaeton was by way of Victorville, Amboy, Searchlight, Las Vegas, Littlefield, Cedar City into Salt Lake and the time noted included all stops and the delays occasioned by mud and slippery roads on the last 120 miles of the trip.

Engineer Charles H. Bigelow, piloting his own car, a Reo six sport phaeton, established this new record with Dave Fassett as riding driver. H. H. MacGillis, a Los Angeles newspaper man, rode as observer.

The distance of 853 miles provides all varieties of driving. The first 100 miles from Los Angeles is principally concrete and asphalt pavement. From Victorville on for hundreds of miles the way lies through rough desert roads, deep with sand and loose rock, or else hard surface with sharp pointed rocks projecting a few inches above the surface, just as if they had been placed there for the purpose of destroying tires.

Aside from Hartford shock absorbers and Alemite spring covers, the car was strictly stock in every particular. Hercules gasoline was chosen by Bigelow as his propelling power, while Penzoi was the lubricant adopted to keep the motor turning over smoothly on its long and gruelling grind.

In a telegram to Byron C. Foy, president and general manager of the Reo Motor Car company of California, Bigelow declared this record to have been the hardest in all his driving experience, due to bad weather conditions and consequent difficulties with the roads. A cold wind chilled members of the party to the bone in crossing the desert, and this chill followed them almost throughout the trip as they climbed considerably over a mile up into the clouds in crossing the great divide.

Harry E. White, Inc., San Fernando and Brand, is the man who distributes this wonderful Reo car in Glendale and surrounding territory.

Safety First campaigns among school children and their parents are producing real results in Philadelphia. The increase in fatalities to children was but 23 per cent as against 53 per cent increase in similar accidents to adults, which seems to prove that grown-ups could profit by practicing what they preach to children.

1,000 MILES IN 899 MINUTES, RECORD

On October 30, 1921, a light eight Oldsmobile broke all records in an endurance run staged by J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors for California.

This test was run on the famous Cotati speedway under official newspaper observation, and until the 1000 miles had been completed, the car maintained an average speed of 66 2-3 miles per hour. Just think of it—a thousand miles in 899 minutes of total elapsed time. Sustained high speed is the greatest of all tests of an engine's stamina—its endurance.

But again we prefer to have the story told by the man responsible for and most familiar with the test and its results. Hence, Mr. Leavitt takes the floor.

"There are many automobiles that can travel one mile, or five miles, at the rate of 66 2-3 miles per hour, but when you ask them to travel 1000 miles at such speed as to net 66 2-3 miles per hour, that is an entirely different story.

"During this gruelling run the only attention the car received was to supply it with oil and gasoline and a very little water. The bonnet was not lifted during the entire 1000 miles.

"For about three hours in the early morning a tule fog was encountered which was so dense that it was next to impossible to discern the four headlights that blazed the way through the darkness. This, of course, slowed down the speed somewhat and made traveling dangerous on the wet, slippery track. During this time W. L. Cooper drove, guided only by his spotlights shining upon the white strip painted upon the track—a mighty nery performance.

"We are, of course, very proud of the performance of this car as it shows so clearly that because of its splendid oiling and cooling systems and its excellent engine construction, this Oldsmobile eight is capable of sustaining high speed with open throttle. There is little else to tell because the run was so wonderfully devoid of the sort of incident usually attending a demonstration of this kind—no accidents, no trouble of any kind with the car. Once an Oldsmobile light eight engine is properly broken in it will stand this kind of punishment indefinitely, and will really like it."

The Oldsmobile is handled in Glendale by C. H. Hunter, 208 West Broadway.

NEW REO 4-PASSENGER COUPE

Here is your opportunity to buy a real closed car for $1000 less than you would pay for other cars having the same features.

Beauty, utility and mechanical goodness are effectively combined to make the New REO All Steel Panned Four-Passenger Coupe one of the outstanding cars of the year, and incidentally, one of the most economical.

Thoughtful designing of the body lines has agreeably combined distinction with dignity. As for the coloring, you may choose either the rich REO Blue or the Cuban Grey, the steel disc wheels being in colors to match.

The interior of the car has an abundance of room—four four-sized adults may comfortably enjoy a spin, for there is leg and knee room for all without crowding. The seats are formed to fit the back, and are upholstered with a heavy woolen body cloth which is of an unusually hard wearing quality yet is quite soft. The color is of a dust-proof shade with light blue striping. A dome light gives light a-plenty for those desiring it.

Powered by the vigorous 50 horse-power engine, which is fitted with ground cylinders and aluminum alloy pistons, carbon troubles seldom if ever bother REO owners.

Mounted on the well-known Reo Six Cylinder Chassis, and beneath the all-steel paneled body, is a rugged framework of selected hardwood, hand matched and fitted and braced with drop forgings.

Concerning the chassis, there is none in the entire field that possesses a greater degree of inbuilt ruggedness or has so clearly established a claim to maximum reliability than the famous REO Six Cylinder Chassis, the culmination of eighteen years of successful automotive engineering.

CHRYSLER SECURES PRESSING BUTTON INTEREST IN MAXWELL

Official announcement was made today that Walter P. Chrysler has largely increased his holdings in the Maxwell Motor corporation and that he will be permanently and exclusively associated with the corporation from this time forward.

Mr. Chrysler was retained nearly three years ago as chairman of the board of directors to undertake the development and upbuilding of the Maxwell-Chalmers properties, but did not relinquish his other important activities or enter into an exclusive arrangement or agree to a permanent association.

Mr. Chrysler is looked upon within the motor car industry as one of the half dozen great executives whose movements are always of considerable significance. Before associating himself with Maxwell he was president and general manager of the Buick Motor company, and later a vice president of General Motors. His definite, permanent identification with Maxwell-Chalmers is expected to arouse widespread interest among automobile men.

Mr. Chrysler's decision to associate himself permanently with the Maxwell-Chalmers management is an indication of the increase which the property has registered in solid values during the last two years. Both from the standpoint of the banker and the manufacturer the property has literally been solidified from the ground up. The highly creditable financial condition of the company is but a reflection of betterments little short of revolu-

GROUNDING THE HORN

Did you know that the "grounding" of the horn is done at the horn button when it is touched? In a single wire system one would expect to have the horn grounded where it is attached to the motor or frame, with the horn button completing a circuit between two ends of a broken wire for the other circuit. But this is not the case, and the explanation is simple enough. By making the horn button complete a ground it is only necessary to run one wire up the steering column; the steering column itself and the other metal parts of the car serving as the second "wire" necessary to complete the circuit which is begun each time the button is pressed.

That it will ruin the ammeter to use it for testing the starter motor? The amperage used in operating the starter motor is more than tionary within the plants themselves.

In discussing his decision today, Mr. Chrysler said: "My faith in the motor car has always been absolute and my conviction of the value of the Maxwell properties has grown greater every day during the past several years. That is about all there is to be said about my permanent association with Maxwell—that it appeals to me as a great property capable of continuing and increasing indefinitely the splendid development now being recorded."

The Maxwell car is handled in Glendale by the Glendale Motor Car company, 124 West Colorado.

the ordinary flash ammeter is designed to accommodate. That it makes a difference what kind of spark plugs are used on a car? Usually the plugs with which the car comes equipped are the best to stick to, for the reason that the position of their points are such as to give best results. Some plugs will not reach far enough into the firing chamber to ignite the gas vapor quick enough; others will reach in so far as to actually touch the top of the pistons. If an engine has a habit of pumping oil plugs with points farthest away from the piston tops are preferable.

SMITH GETS SOME PROGRAM OF FORD COUPES AND TOURINGS AFFECTS THE CITIES

C. L. Smith, Glendale Chevrolet dealer, with showrooms at Orange and Colorado, reports that a number of touring cars and coupes have been received in the past week and more are expected soon. In order to insure immediate delivery in either of these types of Chevrolets, it would be well for prospective buyers to place their orders now. The shortage in cars, says Mr. Smith, should be relieved gradually until the full quota is reached.

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—One phase of the Ford Motor company's expansion program, entailing the expenditure of millions of dollars, is strikingly illustrated in a survey of improvements made in assembly plants throughout the country, all of which have brought better business and employment conditions to the several cities affected. The survey, which is just announced through the Ford News, shows that every assembly plant of the company, numbering 28, is now in full operation and producing more Ford cars and trucks than ever before. New additions have been erected, or are under construction, new equipment has been installed and greater facilities afforded all around.

The plant at Atlanta, Ga., has been considerably enlarged since its reopening a year ago. At that time its capacity was 150 cars and trucks a day. This already has been increased to 210 and when improvements are completed the maximum for an eight-hour day will be from 250 to 275.

Railroad tracks which formerly ran inside the building have been removed to make way for an assembly line and a new concrete loading dock will be completed in June on which big stock conveyors will be installed running into the building. The Cleveland, O., assembly branch has been entirely re-equipped and is now assembling cars at the rate of 150 a day. A new electric enameling oven is in process of construction there to further facilitate the work.

Several changes have been made at the Louisville, Ky., branch, where a one-story addition has been erected. The assembly line has been removed from the third to the first floor, a body oven has been installed for drying all paint coats on open bodies and the finish varnish coat on closed bodies, and a new type electric enameling oven is being erected. Production has been increased from 100 to 170 cars a day.

At Indianapolis, Ind., the branch assembly line has been greatly extended and dock facilities increased which permits this branch to turn out 300 cars a day. Denver, Colo., and Portland, Ore., have again been opened as assembly plants with daily production of 150 and 50 cars respectively. Columbus, O., and Houston, Tex., branches have been equipped with extensive drying ovens and recently enameling ovens have been lengthened in 12 other assembly plants. The New Orleans, La., branch is now housed in a complete new building, 425x425 feet, employing approximately 700 men and turning out from 150 to 200 cars a day, together with 25 closed bodies daily. This plan has also stimulated the sale of Ford cars in Glendale, according to Jesse E. Smith, local Ford dealer of West Colorado street.

With no motive in life a man is like an automobile minus the steering wheel.

SLEEP 'NEATH STARS

Try a While in Hills, Suggests Kelley Motor Co.

"This is the time of the year when all outdoors invites the man with an automobile," said Mr. Kelley of the Kelley Motor Company, 230 North Brand, local Hudson dealer. "This is the time of the year when a man's thoughts turn to vacation days. Vision comes to him—visions of swifly-running mountain streams through stately forests; mental pictures of a carefree life in the open haunts of his brain; dreams of vacation days—days of bright sunshine, with lazy, white, fluffy clouds swimming in the vaulted blue. Is it any wonder that one of these days will find him, with his car and family, heeding the call of this siren that beckons him to follow her in her gypsy wanderings?"

"Then for the life in the open. A life of unrestricted pleasure and happiness. Away from the clamor and clang of the city, with never a care or worry to this new world of beauty that awaits him. Nightfall finds him far from the city with his camp pitched in some secluded spot that he may choose."

"There, after the evening meal is over, he will sit before the flickering fire, smoking his pipe and musing over the wonderful days that are to be his in this new veritable paradise. A few smoldering embers mark the remains of what was but a few minutes before a cheery fire. Time passes quickly in this wonderland—it is bedtime."

"How good the woolly blankets feel as he snuggles among them, protected from the crisp night air. The wind crooning through the tops of the pines soon lulls him to sleep. He is awakened by the loud ticking of his watch beneath his pillow. Pulling back the flap of his tent, he peers out. Everything is still. The early dawn greets him. Soon the first rays of the sun peep over the tops of the purple mountains, driving before them the giant shadows of the pines. The hillsides doff their coat of gray for one of green, a chipmunk scurries through the underbrush—a jay is quarrelous with its mate over the crumbs that they have discovered from the meal the night before. Thus the new day is heralded."

"He sneaks shivering from his warm bed, donning his cold clothes as he emerges from his tent. Soon a wisp of smoke floating skyward announces preparations for breakfast are under way—the odor of eggs frying, of coffee, the sizzle of bacon greet the rest of the family as they come from their tent."

"A wash in the icy brook, and they are ready for that wonderful breakfast. What an appetite everyone has—how the bacon and eggs along with coffee and toast do disappear."

"With the meal over, the camp vanishes as quickly as it had appeared. The car is loaded—he steps on the starter, and they are again on their way, eager for the new adventures that the day will bring. Romance lays at every turn in the road. There ever such a life!"

SPARKS ABOUT BATTERY CARE

Perfunctory attention to the battery is gradually resulting in ignorance of its construction and operation. Car owners add water to the cells—when they happen to think about it—but seldom know exactly why they are obliged to do so. A man who has driven cars for six years still does not know why he should not fill the cells above a certain point.

So cut out this brief summary of the important points and tack them up on the garage wall for future reference.

Water must be added to the cells because it is the water content of the electrolyte solution which evaporates, not the acid.

When drawing solution out of a battery for a hydrometer reading always return it to its proper cell. Unless this is done the strength of the electrolyte in the various cells will naturally vary.

Gassing of the electrolyte will cause a cell to overflow when being charged if too much distilled water is poured in.

You add water before using the car—or run the engine a while after doing the job—so the chemical action will be started and the battery strengthened.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

(Copyright, 1923, by the Ullman Feature Service)

When leaving the car parked in front of a hotel—and if night is approaching—better instruct the doorman in the art of switching on your parking lights. Some cities are strict about parking lights; others are not. Some doormen know the combinations; others don't. Take no chances. Either leave the lights on, or show the doorman how to switch them on.

SIMPLE DESIGN IS FEATURE OF CHANDLER

Simplification in automobile design has long been one of the objectives of engineers. The demand for this improvement has existed from the beginning of the industry, and it is still one of the chief desires of the motorists. Many car owners, however, especially those who never had to labor with one of the earlier types of machines, fail to realize how great has been the progress toward absolute simplicity.

That simplification now is a fact accomplished, and not merely a distant objective, is graphically illustrated in the lubrication chart just issued by the makers of the Chandler six and the Pikes Peak motor.

The Chandler lubrication chart itself is the utmost in simplicity and clearness. A large cut of the chassis occupies the center of the chart, and from each point requiring lubrication a heavy red line leads to a marginal illustration, plainly showing the point in detail. Besides each one of these illustrations, in large type, are the instructions.

The owner can start at the front of the car and make a tour around it with an absolute guide for correct lubrication, by following these half-tone pictures in order and noting the large type directions as he goes.

Comparison of the Chandler chart with the charts of only a few years ago reveal startling changes. All but two of the lubrication points on the new Chandler are under the hood or within reach as one walks around the car. There is no more of the straining and reaching under the chassis. Only the transmission and the differential, which need attention comparatively seldom, require any special effort on the part of the operator.

Of the total of 32 lubrication points, only nine require the use of grease. These are the four hub bearings, four steering rod connections, and the steering gear case, none of which require frequent attention. The Chandler, therefore, has virtually eliminated this much dreaded feature of maintenance—the necessity for handling grease.

All the remaining lubrication points on the Chandler call for the use of oil. The chassis is equipped with dust-proof oil cups, easily filled by the use of the ordinary long-spouted squirt can. The owner can walk around the car and fill all these cups in a few minutes and keep his hands clean while doing so. The oil can is always ready, in its bracket mounted on the crankcase, and the driver can give attention to the oiling points during any short halt while the car is out on the road.

The attention that has been given to the owners' needs, in making care and maintenance quick and easy, is proving of especial appeal to women drivers. They find that to give the Chandler proper attention is not a disagreeable ordeal. Even the crankcase of the Chandler may be drained cleanly and quickly. One does not have to get underneath and screw out a plug. He simply raises the hood on the left side of the motor and by turning a large wingnut, which projects up through the apron of the crankcase within easy reach, opens the draincock at the bottom of the oil compartment to permit the old oil to run off.

Besides the ease that the owner of the Chandler enjoys in looking after his car, the Chandler company expects material benefits to result from its simplification. It believes that if care and maintenance are made easy, free from delays and dirt and grease, the owner will take better care of his car. The resultant improvement in the operation of the car and the increase in its effective life are expected to add greatly to the Chandler's prestige.

The Chandler is handled in Glendale by the Smith & Howe company, 116 North Maryland avenue.

PARTY IN KISSEL INVESTIGATES LAGUNA

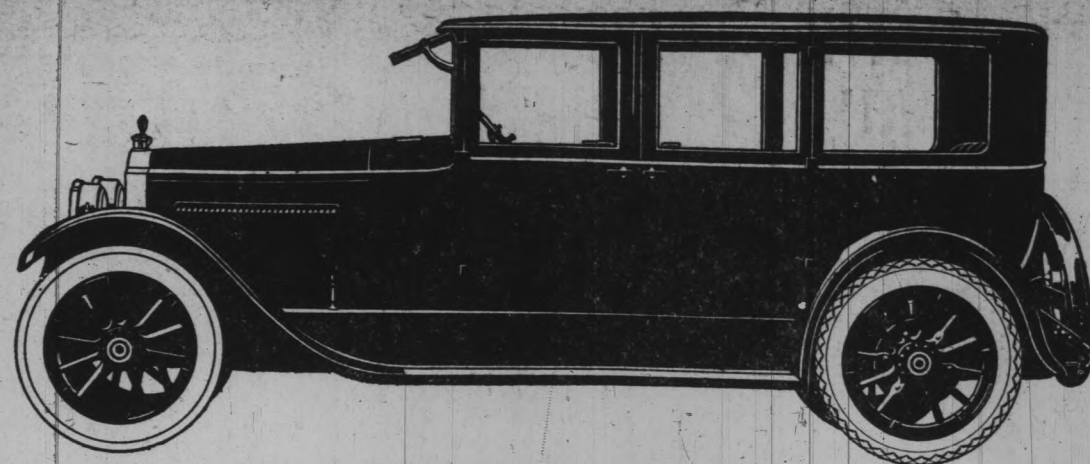

Of all the beaches of Southern California, Laguna claims especial merit because it combines the charm of the ocean with the charm of the hills, and because it possesses a certain isolation from the main routes of travel that has kept it free from the doubtful fascinations of the roller-coaster and the hot dog. It is not to be wondered at that Laguna was chosen by many of the most prominent artists of the southwest as their home, and beauties that the little Orange county beach possesses have been portrayed more often and more faithfully than have the charms of any other beach resort of the west.

At the town of Laguna, there is a wide stretch of sandy beach. To the south towards Arch Beach, the coast is broken by many rocky points, with many little sandy coves. The endless combat of surf and rock gives an interest to the Laguna shores that the sandy beaches do not possess.

The Laguna coast is a beautiful one for the entire nine miles to Serra. Just before you come to Serra is San Juan Point and the little blue bay immortalized by Dana, for it was there his ship anchored to take on a cargo of the hides that they threw over the edge of the cliffs to the beach below.

A party in a Kissel, sent out this week by Nelson & Burr, 108 East Colorado, local Kissel dealers, found the road to Laguna good, while the road beyond was a little rough and dusty.
